WETS PREDICT MAINE WILL VOTE REPEAL TODAY

Three Other States Act Tomorrow.

Portland Me., Sept. 10.—(AP)—With its history of more than three-quarters of a century of prohibition, Maine will vote tomorrow to determine whether it shall be the 26th state to ratify repeal of the 18th amendment.

Repealists and prohibitionists made their final appeal over the week-end, concluding as quiet a campaign as ever preceded a September election in this state.

Repeal forces made their concluding bid for support in a rally in the Portland city hall last night. There Postmaster General James A. Farley and Gov. Louis J. Brann expressed confidence in the outcome, warning the electorate, however, against being indifferent to the responsibility of voting.

Drys Use Churches.

The final exhortation to the prohibition cohorts was delivered today from the church pulpits throughout the state.

Robinson Verrill, chairman of the Maine division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, estimated the sentiment was "two to one for repeal," but said the size of the majority would depend on the number of ballots cast.

The Rev. Frederick W. Smith, superintendent of the Maine Christian Civic league, chief prohibition leader, expressed conviction that "the majority sentiment of the state is with us."

Ballot Machinery Complex.

"By voting to repeal the 18th amendment," Gov. Brann declared, "Maine does not impeach its right to control its own internal affairs or jeopardize its right to formulate its own laws and prescribe its own police regulations."

Separate slates of candidates, unofficially pledged for and against repeal, but not designated as such on the ballots, will be presented to the voters in each of the 16 counties. In the smallest counties the number of candidates will be only four. In Cumberland county, the largest, there will be 26. In York county, besides "indorsed" prohibition and repealist slates of seven each, there is an "insurgent" wet slate of five candidates.

Single independent repealists also appear as candidates on the ballots in two other counties, Knox and Washington.

In the smaller communities, those of less than 300 population, the polls will close at 5 p. m. [eastern standard time], elsewhere at 7 p. m.

Three Others Vote Tomorrow.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Maine, the nation's first bone dry state, will vote tomorrow on repealing the eighteenth amendment and on Tuesday the citizens of Minnesota, Maryland and Colorado will ballot.

If the wet's predictions are realized, 29 states will have voted to ratify the repeal amendment, only seven less than the necessary 36. The drys are disputing every wet prediction of success.

In Colorado Superintendent Dexheimer of the state Anti-Saloon league said the anti-repeal forces were "depending on the rural vote to offset expected wet majorities in Denver, Trinidad and Pueblo." Edward Nicholson, head of the Colorado Repeal league, forecast a plurality of more than 50,000. F. Scott McBride will address meetings at Denver tomorrow night as the drys' final effort. Fifteen delegates will be elected for the convention on Sept. 26. The polls are open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. mountain time.

Ritchie's Forecast and Volstead's.

Gov. Ritchie of Maryland predicted that his state would vote for repeal. George W. Crabbe, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, said the dry vote would "surprise the press and public generally."

The Maryland voters will elect three delegates to the state repeal convention, to be held on Oct. 18, from each of the state's six congressional districts. They also will elect six delegates from the state at large.

Andrew J. Volstead, father of the federal enforcement law that bears his name, was summoned from his law office in Great Falls to aid the anti-repealists in their fight in Minnesota. His associates are claiming vic

CUBA GETS NEW PRESIDENT AND ALSO A REVOLT

Army Officers Seek Help of U. S. Navy.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 10.—Dr Ramon Grau San Martin, distinguished professor of anatomy, a specialist on stomach disorders and a member of the radical revolutionary junta which ruled Cuba following last Monday night's coup d'état, was inaugurated provisional president of Cuba at noon today.

Five minutes later the next revolution had started and the great gray bulk of the battleship Mississippi, a reminder of intervention by the United States if necessary, steamed closer to shore.

Revolt Under Full Swing.

The "revolt" got under full swing tonight when Grau San Martin was given the alternative by army and navy officers and the ABC, all powerful revolutionary group, of resigning or facing another coup d'état. The coup is aimed to reinstate the ousted president, Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, if he will accept. Grau San Martin is reported to have said he would give his answer tomorrow. It is predicted by opposition groups that the new régime will fall in a few days, possibly within 24 or 48 hours.

The demand to get out was presented to the new president by Col. Horacio Ferrer, secretary of war under De Cespedes.

The officers propose to get De Cespedes to summon his old cabinet to a meeting and proclaim his government is still the existing one on the theory that De Cespedes never formally resigned, but simply walked out when the junta gave him a shove.

Anti-American Demonstration.

If this causes violence the plan then is to call on United States Ambassador Welles to protect the government, summon the Mississippi and land the marines as a matter not of intervention but of occupation.

A pronounced feeling against American interference of any sort in Cuban affairs attended today's arrival of the new government—the third since Gen. Gerardo Machado was put to flight on Aug. 12—and the situation seems more critical than ever.

Central park, facing the capitol, was the scene late this afternoon of an anti-American demonstration. Red flags were raised and redder speeches were made. It was called by the Anti-Imperialistic league of Cuba, an ultra-radical organization, which placarded the city this morning with posters saying, "Out with the Yankee navy!"

Orators harangued the crowds with vitriolic speeches against Ambassador Welles, President Roosevelt, the American government and navy, the Standard Oil company and other American interests in Cuba. They attacked the new Cuban government itself, urging sovietism, bolshevism, Fascism, Hitlerism and every other new brand of dictatorship.

Reds Stage Parade.

Throngs estimated at 5,000 gathered at Central park. Sergio Carbo, the most radical member of the defunct junta, authorized the anti-American demonstration. The park and adjacent boulevards were jammed with Cubans. Most of them congregated around the monument of José Marti, Cuba's apostle of freedom.

Various communist and radical organizations assembled, marching past the executive palace through the upper Prado. Marchers with red flags shouted, "Down with all governments!" "Down with President Roosevelt's imperialism!" "Down with Welles!" and "Out with the Yankee navy!" One banner read: "We demand the Standard Oil give free gasoline to the government."

Speaker Assails U. S.

"The western hemisphere today lives in the clutches of an enormous American octopus whose tentacles squeeze us and annihilate not only Cuba but every Latin-American nation," he said. "This display of American brutal strength and the imminent peril of intervention has come not because of a necessity to protect American lives and properties here but because President Roosevelt, failing in an attempt to purchase Cuban consciences with gold, now wants to dominate Cubans with the fire and spit

Police Sound Sour Note for a Trombonist

Services at the Trinity Gospel mission, 203 South Halsted street, were conducted yesterday without the usual baritone solos and trombone music of the Rev. Walter J. Bateman.

Bateman was sitting in a cell in the detective bureau, charged with bigamy. He owes his plight to the fact that Edward De Vries, who conducts the mission, doubles in brass as a soul saver and a sergeant of police.

Sang in Aimee's Choir.

Bateman is 33 years old. He says that he is the son of a minister living in Kansas City, and that he once sang in Aimee Semple McPherson's choir. He has appeared on radio evangelistic programs in Chicago under the name of Robert Warwick. He was ordained to the ministry of the Assembly of God church several years ago in Canton, O., he says.

He became a member of the staff at the Halsted street mission a year ago, and, says Sergt. De Vries, his songs and renditions of sacred music on the trombone did much to brighten the session there. They proved particularly attractive to Miss Louise Stumpf, a member of the congregation, and on last Nov. 5 Bateman married her.

Receives Letter from Wife.

Recently, however, Sergt. DeVries received a letter at the mission from Mrs. Esther Bateman of Toledo, O. Mrs. Bateman asserts that the mission trombonist married her eleven years ago and deserted her and their son, now 9 years old, in 1930.

Sergt. DeVries asked Mrs. Bateman to come to Chicago. She arrived and signed a complaint charging her husband with bigamy, and he was arrested Saturday night in the home at 3219 Craft street, where he was living with his second wife.

Thrush Joins S. S. Berlin 300 Miles Off New York

New York, Sept. 10.—(AP)—The liner Berlin docked this morning with a crested brown thrush traveling first cabin. The thrush boarded the liner Saturday morning 300 miles out of New York and at once took possession of cabin No. 27. It is supposed the bird flew to the Berlin from an outbound ship.

Kills Bruno, Neb., Mayor for Letting Son Smoke

Bruno, Neb., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Ludvik Hasik, 38, mayor of Bruno, was shot and killed tonight by Louis Dolezal, 19 year old farmer boy. Dolezal then shot and killed himself. A letter given to Hasik's son indicated that Hasik was killed because he allowed his son to smoke cigarets and play for dances.

FLY WITHOUT PILOT; PLANE FALLS, KILLS THREE IN CALIFORNIA

San Bernardino, Cal., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Three men plunged 500 feet to death here today in an airplane piloted by one of them who took off suddenly while the airport manager, who was to have been the pilot, was getting his helmet and goggles.

The dead were Robert Alslit, 27, of San Bernardino, who piloted the ship, and his two companions, who were identified as Edgar L. Saperite, 27, and Herbert S. Kelley, 27, both of Burbank.

Guinn Cook, manager of the airport, said Alslit came to the airport with the men and asked him to take them for a ride. Cook consented and Alslit went over to warm up the motor of a ship. While Cook was getting goggles and a helmet, he heard the roar of the motor and ran out to see Alslit take off.

8 Drown When Flood Tumbles House in Creek

Fort Thompson, S. D., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Eight persons were drowned, great property damage was incurred, and much live stock was destroyed early today when a cloudburst drove small creeks out of their banks on the Crow Creek Indian reservation, flooding lowlands and sweeping homes and farm buildings away.

Trapped in their beds by a 12 foot wall of water which surged down Soldier's creek, two families, comprising eight persons, were carried away and drowned. More than a dozen other persons caught in the sudden flood narrowly escaped death.

The victims were Fred Loudner, 41; his wife, 37; their four children, Caroline, 17; Betty, 9; William, 5; Elberta, 3, and Mr. and Mrs. Sol La Plante of Rosebud, relatives who arrived yesterday for a visit.

Five bodies were recovered and search was continued for those of Loudner, La Plante and the youngest Loudner child. Hundreds of Indians aided in boats and on horseback, and an airplane cruised up and down the Missouri river.

Awaken Just in Time.

Descending without warning about 3 a. m. following a 10 inch rainfall, the flood marooned fifteen persons before it smashed the Loudner home. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Yellowback, also visiting the Loudners, were sleeping with their two chilren in a tent a few feet from the house. Yellowback helped his family into a nearby coupe, then sought to warn the Loudner household. As he neared the door the house split in two and drifted away. Yellowback and his family were rescued by residents from Fort Thompson in a boat.

George Shields, whose home is nearly a mile up the creek from the Loudner homesite, was awakened by a roar. Before he could get dressed water began pouring through the windows of his home. Shields swam to trees with three members of his household and aided three others to safety on the roof of his log cabin.

Two Drown Near Denver.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Two persons drowned, at least three were missing and damage estimated in the hundred thousands of dollars was caused by a series of floods that deluged Denver and suburbs today.

The known dead: Mrs. Elizabeth James, 86 year old farm woman, and her 9 year old grandson, Benny James.

On the main street of Littleton last night three buildings collapsed and fifty basements were flooded.

Science to Add 7 More Years to Normal Life

The chemistry of nutrition is building a scientific structure which gives assurance of longer life and a more virile race. This is the theme of a report to the symposium of the agricultural and food division of the American Chemical society by Prof. Henry C. Sherman of the department of chemistry of Columbia university.

The report was made public last night. It is to be presented during the 86th meeting of the society, designated as the "Century of Progress meeting," which opens today. More than 3,000 chemists are expected to attend the sessions.

Recent researches show men and women now are taller than their ancestors. Chemistry, holding the key to the understanding of the nutritional processes in plant and animal life, promises to make humanity more sturdy and longer lived, according to the report.

Expectation of Life.

The expectation of life, Prof. Sherman holds, will be extended from the age of 70 to the age of 77. Man in his chosen tasks will be at the height of his powers at 65 instead of 58 years. The age at which it is difficult to get jobs in a new field, now commonly put at 45, will be 52.

Adults nearing 60 should learn as readily as the young, the food chemist avers, for psychology has determined that the capacity for learning is undiminished at middle age. Age will yield less readily to youth, he adds, and men and women of more advanced years will rule to a greater extent in human affairs.

All this will emerge from an improved internal environment, which, passed on to succeeding generations, will form a bulwark against disease, enlarge the prime of life, and postpone senility, Dr. Sherman asserts.

"While chemistry will not make blondes or brunettes, it will, by providing this superior environment, make men and women more powerful constitutionally, if not larger, and aid in the development of muscular strength through increased participation in sports and right living," Dr. Sherman said. "We should be mindful, nevertheless, that buoyant health is not a monopoly of larger people.

An Improved Environment.

"We are learning what things to feed into the body in order that it may be helped to maintain a more constantly optimal chemical environment within, and we have reason to anticipate that such chemical improvement of the internal environment may be favorable to those developments of mind and spirit which are in some way linked with the higher health of the body.

"The dramatic series of discoveries regarding the existence in food and the significance in nutrition of a whole group of substances not particularly related in their chemical natures or nutritional functions, commonly called 'vitamins,' demonstrate impressively the rapidity with which many fundamentally important discoveries have been made in the past few years.

"In our experiments at Columbia university we have families of rats which are thriving in the twenty-seventh generation on uniform diet," Prof. Sherman continues.

Growth Is More Rapid.

"Yet, on enriching the already adequate diet in certain of its chemical factors there results an improvement in the general nutritional condition. Growth is more rapid and efficient, the death rate drops, vitality is higher at all ages, average longevity increases 10 per cent, and the prime of life is extended."

The diet on which rats thrive is enriched by increasing the proportion of "protective foods," milk, fruit, vegetables, and eggs, Prof. Sherman states.

GIVES NEW AID IN WARFARE ON PUBLIC ENEMIES

Files Fingerprints of Criminals.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—In a new effort in its drive to crush the "army of the underworld," the department of justice is compiling fingerprints and other records of racketeers, kidnapers, extortionists and other criminals. In August, 346 fugitives from justice, including many notorious criminals, were located by fingerprint identification, the department announced today.

The identification unit of the division of investigation is endeavoring to collect and establish the most complete record of criminals obtained by any country in the world.

Nearly 4 Million on File.

On Sept. 1 there were on file 3,870,810 fingerprints of known or suspected criminals of all types in the identification unit. Now about 2,200 fingerprint records are being received each day from the 6,066 law enforcement agencies in the United States, and from foreign countries which cooperate with the division in the exchange of criminal identification information. Previous police records are established in more than 45 per cent of the fingerprint cards received.

Among the records recently received are those of the fingerprints of 157 Chicago criminals.

Daily use is made of the identification information by the federal authorities and other peace officers. Officials said the collection will be of invaluable assistance to Joseph B. Keenan, assistant to the attorney general in charge of the crime campaign. J. Edgar Hoover is head of the division of investigation.

New File Established.

"As a part of the identification unit of the division," the department said today, "there was established a few months ago what is known as a single fingerprint file. This is separate from the main collection of fingerprints, and contains in it the fingerprints of known gangsters, kidnapers and extortionists, each fingerprint classified separately and filed in designated sequence so that the latent fingerprint impressions found at the scenes of crimes may be checked against them to establish the identity of suspects.

"By latent fingerprint is meant the fingerprint impression left upon some object at the scene of a crime, which impression, while not obvious at first, may be brought out by application of chemical powders.

Photographs Also Filed.

"There is also maintained in this same file in the division a detailed descriptive card of each person whose fingerprints are maintained in this file, together with his photograph. This special file is limited to the fingerprints of known or suspected racketeers, kidnapers and extortionists.

"Indicative of the value of the single fingerprint system which has been established during the month of August, 40 latent fingerprint cases were handled. The latent fingerprints in these cases were examined and searched in the single fingerprint file, and identifications were definitely established in six instances."

ACT TO END TRIAL DELAYS

The dilatory tactics of defense lawyers in criminal cases will be met by a series of extra prosecutions, State's Attorney Courtney announced yesterday. It has been called to the prosecutor's attention by his assistants that criminals who have found they can no longer bargain with the courts for lighter punishments in return for pleas of guilty are resorting to dragging out criminal trials indefinitely.

An illustration of defense tactics was pointed out by Assistant State's Attorney James A. Brown, who is prosecuting Theodore Ptak and Walter Solon on a series of robbery charges. The case is on trial in Judge Walter La Buy's court.

Under the law, in selecting a jury each defendant is entitled to 20 peremptory challenges, or in the case on trial, to 40 challenges. The defense so far has exercised 27 challenges in one day. When the trial is resumed this morning the defense attorneys can take up another court day before the other 13 challenges are exhausted.

Named in Six Indictments.

The defendants are named in six indictments. In some of the indictments two other defendants are named. Prosecutor Brown said that the police informed him that through the arrest of the group some 200 robbery cases were solved.

Prosecutor Courtney ordered that, instead of the state being content with one conviction against defendants where a series of robbery cases are involved, three or four of the cases be prosecuted and the sentences be made to run consecutively. This rule is to apply particularly where the defense deliberately drags out a trial, he said. In the past the prosecution usually struck off the remaining cases or allowed the sentences to run concurrently where more than one conviction was obtained.

The ten judges who today are starting the second week of the fall term in the Criminal court are expected to swing into action this morning on the renewed crime drive, which was originally started soon after Aug. 1 by Judge John Prystalski, former chief justice of the court. The crime war has been lagging for the past week, due to a change of administration and the fact that witnesses had not been notified that cases were set for trial.

Expects Progress This Week.

Judge Philip L. Sullivan, the new chief justice of the court, said he expects the judges to start making progress this week. The courts lost ground last week because the grand jury returned more indictments than were disposed of by the judges.

One of the cases scheduled for trial today before Judge Thomas J. Lynch is that involving Harry Lang, suspended detective sergeant. He is charged with perjury and with assault to murder Frank Nitti, former Capone lieutenant.

The perjury indictment grew out of a charge made by Lang, in which he declared that Nitti attempted to kill him and that he then shot the gangster. The shooting occurred during a raid on a downtown office in which Nitti and other hoodlums were meeting. The wounds received by Nitti nearly caused his death.

At the trial of Nitti for shooting Lang testimony was to the effect that the policeman had shot Nitti and then had shot himself in the arm in order to make it appear tha a gun battle occurred. Lang, who previously had testified before the grand jury that Nitti shot him, refused to testify at the trial on the ground that "I might incriminate myself."

Nitti Becomes Complainant.

Nitti changed from the position of defendant to prosecuting witness. Although he was reluctant to assume the rôle of complainant, Nitti has appeared in court on all the numerous occasions on which the case has been called for trial.

However, Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty, who is in charge of the prosecution, said he did not know whether Nitti would appear today, inasmuch as the police have a vagrancy warrant for him under the new criminal reputation act. Prosecutor Dougherty said this action was taken by the police without his knowledge or consent.

At the time of the Nitti trial Lang was credited with boasting through a lawyer that if he was "pushed too hard he would talk and ruin the Democratic party." Attorney Abe Marowitz, who is now representing Lang, said this statement was unauthorized by his client.

It was also rumored at the time that Lang had been promised $10,000 by Ted Newberry, a gang chief, who since was slain, to get rid of Nitti. This rumor was submitted to the grand jury, but Lang denied its truth, and no evidence was discovered to substantiate it.

Court Record of Case.

The court record of the Lang case shows the following:

April 7—Lang indicted and the case assigned to Judge Prystalski's call for April 20.
May 1—Assigned to Judge Rudolph Desort and continued by order of court to June 13.
June 13—Held on court call to June 16.
June 16—Motion for a change of venue presented and granted by Judge Desort. Case sent to chief justice for reassignment.
June 19—Case assigned to Judge Lynch and held on call.
July 11—Continued by agreement of state and defense to September term.

Another case scheduled to start to trial today is that of "Piccolo Pete" Pace, who is charged with slaying Policeman Patrick A. Ryan because the latter refused to drink with him in a soft drink parlor. Friends of Pace recently invaded a public school yard for a benefit ball game to raise a defense fund.

However, the game was not successful apparently in raising enough money, because the public defender is to appear in court as Pace's counsel. Attorney Samuel Hoffman withdrew from the case several weeks ago. The trial is scheduled for the court of Judge Charles P. Molthrop.

2 TOUHY GUNMEN ELUDE POLICE IN LABOR SLAYING

Thomas Touhy, brother of the gang leader, Roger Touhy, and James McFadden, son of Thomas (Father Tom) McFadden, continued yesterday to elude the police. Touhy and McFadden are being sought in connection with the fatal shooting of James (Trouble) Tribble, Touhy gangster and ex-convict, in the office of the Chicago Teamsters' union at 637 South Ashland avenue, Friday. Roger Touhy and Father Tom are in custody in Minneapolis awaiting trial for kidnaping.

Tribble was fatally wounded in a gun battle when he and Touhy and McFadden raided the union headquarters. John Thibeau, secretary of the Ice Cream Drivers' union, is alleged to have returned their fire. Tribble is believed to have been killed by a bullet from an automatic pistol found in the headquarters by police. Efforts are being made to trace its ownership.

Nine men present at the time of the shooting are being held by the Maxwell street police. No charges have been preferred against them pending reopening of the inquest into Tribble's death tomorrow. They are Thibeau, Thomas J. Keegan, John Sheridan Jr., Joseph Grady, Leo Donnelly, Stanley Righton, Albert Sagerstrom, Michael Naughton, and James Burke.

MOB THREATENS TO LYNCH NEGRO IN NEW YORK CITY

Police Rescue Comes After Attack.

New York, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Enraged citizens early today captured a Negro in flight after an attack on a woman in a west side subway station, and police said they believed the prisoner to be the man sought for a long series of depredations and assaults in Central park.

The man was rescued from late homegoers in the subway by two officers with drawn pistols, when a good sized mob gathered to shouts of "lynch him," "shoot him." The policemen were booed when they rushed the man out of the subway to the 28th street police station.

At the station, the Negro gave his name as Alvin Alfred, 25, and gave a west side address which officers said was fictitious.

Says Description Tallies.

Patrolman Peter Conway, who aided in the capture, said Alfred's description "tallies minutely" with that of the Central park marauder, who has been the object of an intensive manhunt by residents and police in the Central park district.

Mrs. Bertha Carroll, 32, victim of the attack in the women's rest room of the subway, was taken to St. Vincent's hospital where it was reported she was suffering from shock and severe bruises and lacerations on the head and face. Otherwise, physicians said, she had not been harmed.

Mrs. Carroll was carrying a jar of jam when she stepped into the rest room about 2:30 a. m. Her husband, William, was standing on the platform watching for their train.

Smashes Jar Over Head.

She told police a huge Negro, stripped to the waist and barefooted, seized her when she entered the rest room and tore the jam jar from her hands. She screamed, she said, and the man smashed the jar over her head and knocked her down.

Carroll, a husky butcher, rushed in, picked up the assailant bodily and hurled him against the wall. As they fought, Mrs. Carroll crawled to the station platform and called to a man coming down the subway stairs. He ran for the police.

POLICE ARREST JACK BARRY ON A VAG CHARGE

The police and court war on hoodlums under the new vagrancy law, which permits convictions on the basis of criminal reputation, continued last night with the arrest of John [West Side Jack] Berry, ex-convict and lieutenant of the late Big Tim Murphy.

The war will go on today when James Adducci, another west side gangster, is placed on trial under the vagrancy law. Tomorrow Edward [Spike] O'Donnell, south side beer chief, will go on trial.

Barry's arrest wa the newest development in the campaign, which has already resulted in four convictions and no acquittals. He was seized in an automobile at Madison street and Hamlin avenue by Detectives Walter Kelly and Leonard Kozlowski of the Fillmore street station. He surrendered without protest, and was taken to the station.

Says He's No Vagrant.

"I'm no vagrant," he told Lieut. Thomas Duffy later. "I'm in legitimate business, and can prove it."

Barry, the police were informed, has been out of the rackets for three or four years, and for the last year—until three weeks ago—had a saloon at 1155 Madison street. However, the police consider him a vagrant under the new statute on the strength of his past reputation.

In 1922 Barry was convicted in federal court of complicity in the $378,000 Dearborn street station mail robbery, for which his chief, Murphy, had been earlier convicted. Barry entered Leavenworth penitentiary in 1924. In 1927, after his release, he was again sentenced to prison for siphoning whisky from bonded supplies in the Morand Brothers warehouse.

More recently he was ousted as secretary-treasurer of the Newspaper Wagon Drivers' union.

Adducci on Trial Today.

Adducci, known as an assistant of Dago Lawrence Mangano, will go to trial on the vagrancy charge this morning before Judge Thomas A. Green in Felony court. He denies being a hoodlum, saying he has worked for the city and county for 10 years.

O'Donnell, who will be tried before Judge Green tomorrow, asserts he is a business man.

CITY JUDGES BLAMED FOR CROWDING JAIL WITH BOY OFFENDERS

The practice of continuing the cases of boy auto thieves and other youthful offenders and sending them to the county jail to await trial, was blamed by officials yesterday for crowded conditions at the jail.

Municipal court judges, it is said, have adopted the continuance device to punish young offenders without the stigma of actual jail sentences. The judges continue the trials, sometimes for several months, and set the bail high enough so the offenders must stay in jail till the trial date arrives. Then the cases are dismissed.

Yesterday morning the jail had 1,320 prisoners. It has a theoretical capacity of 1,741, but because of the necessity of segregating different types of prisoners, the actual capacity without crowding is only about 1,200. Nineteen per cent of the jail population consists of boys between 17 and 20 years old.

Held in the jail are 381 prisoners awaiting trial on cases continued in the Municipal court. Of these 253 have cases pending in the Boys' court.

Two of the prisoners, Joseph Howland, 20 years old, and Franklin Cort, 18 years old, must wait until Feb. 6 for hearing on a charge of tampering with an automobile. Michael Raulo, their companion, who was on probation on a similar charge when they were arrested, must wait until Dec. 5 for a hearing.

BELGIANS CHEER KING WHO OPENS SCHELDT TUNNEL

[Copyright: 1933: By the New York Times.]

ANTWERP, Sept. 10.—King Albert of the Belgians, accompanied by the royal family, came to this city this afternoon to preside at elaborate ceremonies for the inauguration of the new tunnels under the Scheldt estuary.

The United States ambassador, Dave H. Morris, and the United States consul general at Antwerp, Marion Letcher, assisted at the ceremonies, which began with the decoration of two American engineers and a vehicular tunnel policing expert of New York. King Albert fastened the insignia of officers of the crown on Engineers Ole Singsted and Walter Douglas, while Cornelius Camalane of New York was created a chevalier of the order of Leopold II.

The king said the tunnels would open up the development of a large area hitherto condemned to isolation. The royal family then drove through the vehicular tunnel and later presided at the inauguration of the pedestrian tunnel on the further side of the Scheldt. All Flanders came to Antwerp to welcome the royal family with an enthusiastic demonstration of loyalty.

DOUBT AL CAPONE WILL BE BROUGHT HERE FOR TRIAL

Government's Obligation to Prisoner Cited.

Federal officials in Chicago express doubt that Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, in the exercise of his discretion, will order Al Capone returned from Atlanta penitentiary to stand trial in the state's racket conspiracy case.

Many factors enter into consideration of the question, the federal officials declare, and not the least of these is the attorney general's opinion regarding the state's chances of convicting Capone. Mr. Cummings is reported to be desirous of accommodating the state, but there are certain obligations on his part that cannot be overlooked.

Contention of Lawyers.

Capone's lawyers contend that because the gangster has been in the penitentiary since May 4, 1932, and was in the county jail six months prior to that date, after his conviction for income tax fraud, a conspiracy case against him is barred by the statute of limitations, which is eighteen months in misdemeanor cases in Illinois.

There is another state law which says that time spent outside the jurisdiction of the court cannot be counted in invoking the statute of limitations, but Capone's lawyers argue that this applies only to a voluntary absence.

The government officials, it is reported, are inclined to agree with the Capone lawyers' contention in this respect.

The date of the conspiracy, as set forth in the indictment, was May 18, 1933, when Capone was in the penitentiary, but that merely means the date of the conspiracy's termination. Evidence against the defendants is admissible within an eighteen month period preceding the date. This would go back to Nov. 18, 1931, but Capone was in the county jail at that time. The state, of course, contends that Capone could have been involved in a conspiracy while in jail.

Ward of the Government.

Aside from the legal aspects of the indictment, Capone is a ward of the government, having been sentenced to the custody of the attorney general, and the government has a moral responsibility, at least in theory, of protecting him from possible assassination. The government also is concerned with preventing the possible escape of its ward.

Nothing definite has come from Washington indicating what the attorney general's decision will be, but local federal officials are doubtful that Capone will be ordered brought here for trial.

CHICAGO GUNMAN GETS LIFE IN MICHIGAN; HIS TRIAL IN SECRET

Grand Haven, Mich., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Earl Doyle, 35 year old Chicago and Kansas City gunman, was taken quietly out of this city today and transferred to Jackson prison to begin a life term for robbing the Peoples Savings bank here on Aug. 18. At that time four persons were wounded. Doyle had pleaded guilty last night and was sentenced by Judge Fred T. Miles. That was kept secret because of reports that accomplices of Doyle in the bank holdup were planning to free him.

An automobile load of men carrying pistols and machine guns were reported on Friday morning headed out of St. Joseph toward Grand Haven. Extra guards were placed around the county jail and nothing said of Doyle's sentence until he was well on his way to prison.

SUE DOUGLAS IS 100; GREETINGS COME BY RADIO

Birthday greetings broadcast by a national network was only one of the thrills that her hundredth birthday yesterday brought to Mrs. Sue Douglas. At the home of her son, Scott M. Douglas, at 20 Indian Hill road, Winnetka, there was a steady stream of callers to offer congratulations and to sample the huge birthday cake with 100 candles alight on its frosted surface. Mrs. Douglas, who was born Sept. 10, 1833, in Steuben county, New York, was for many years a correspondent for newspapers and magazines and still reads some of them daily.

TELLS HOW SHE WAITED 9 DAYS TO KILL GRACE

Kept Death Watch from Hotel Window.

Santa Cruz, Cal., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—After twenty-four hours of stubborn silence Mrs. Frieda Wilhelmina Augusta Weltz, 43 year old nurse, tonight gave "a scandal being spread about me" as her reason for slaying her former employer, Francis Joseph Morgan Grace Sr., 57, member of a wealthy shipping family.

"I could tell you how it all comes back to him, if I wanted to," she declared defiantly, "but I won't. I wouldn't tell my most intimate friend."

Planned Crime for Year.

Mrs. Weltz boasted she had planned the killing for a year. Twice she thrust aside opportunities before she shot her victim. Grace, nephew of the late W. R. Grace, builder of a steamship empire with vast possessions in South America, was slain last night on his estate in the exclusive Beach Hill section as he chatted with his nurse, Miss Helene Roberts, 28.

For nine days—"twenty-four hours a day"—said Mrs. Weltz, she had spied on her victim from a room in a hotel which overlooks the estate.

Mrs. Weltz told her story from the hospital bed to which she was taken after she had taken poison on her arrest. She was overpowered as Grace died by Miss Roberts and servants of the Grace household before she could flee.

"Got Cold Feet First Time."

"I did it," she said proudly. "I planned it for a year. I'm glad I did it."

"I was all ready to do it once before, but I got cold feet. That was when I followed him down here from San Francisco about three weeks ago. I got cold feet and went back.

"Then I came here again nine days ago. I got the same room. I watched the grounds of his home all day, every day and I knew what he was doing 24 hours of every day, because I was watching.

"Another time I was all set to do it during the nine days. But he looked to me like he was drunk. So I didn't do it then. I wanted him to know he was going to die, who was going to kill him and why.

He Knew Why, She Asserts.

"Finally my chance came yesterday. I didn't want his wife to see it. I saw her and a friend drive away. Then I walked from the hotel into the grounds of the home. I found him in the garden sitting on a bench with his new nurse.

"He knew what was going to happen when he saw me."

Mrs. Weltz, a plump woman, paused. Her eyes flashed.

"He knew, and he knew why. Last winter I accosted him with a gun and told him I was going to kill him. One bullet was enough for him."

Intended to End Own Life.

Mrs. Weltz said she had intended to kill herself after she shot Grace, but was balked when Miss Roberts grappled with her. She declared she does not want to do anything to help herself. Constantly she repeated, "I want to die."

Hospital authorities declare she is out of danger. Police took her to the hospital immediately after she swallowed the contents of a bottle which she snatched from her purse. Antidotes were promptly administered.

Mrs. Weltz said the last time she saw Grace he told her she was oversensitive about the "scandal." She refused to give details. District Attorney J. Frank Murphy said he "had an idea" of what it is, but would make no revelation.

Tells Story of Shooting.

A dramatic story of the slaying was told by Mrs. Weltz' pretty blonde successor, Miss Roberts. She attended Grace because of a heart ailment which forced his retirement from the W. R. Grace company years ago and made him a semi-invalid.

"I was sitting on the bench with him about 5:30 p. m. when I saw Mrs. Weltz appear," she began. "Mr. Grace walked to her and they conversed in undertones. Then Mr. Grace came back and sat down. From the expression on his face I gathered something was wrong.

"I asked him if he wanted to get the woman away. He said he did. I went to her and asked her to leave. Then I went to help Mr. Grace to the house.

"The next thing I saw was a gun in her white gloved hand. It appeared like magic. Then she shot. The bullet came within a fraction of an inch of me. It struck Mr. Grace in the right side and tore through his chest. He made no outcry.

Grapple for Gun.

"I turned and grabbed at the gun with one hand. The woman fought me with the strength of ten men and screamed, 'I'll let you have it!' I shouted for help."

Mrs. Weltz, who served with the Red Cross during the war, was subdued when the cook and other servants came to the aid of Miss Roberts.

Immediately after the shooting Grace's retainers closed and locked the gates of his estate so effectively that even police had difficulty getting into the grounds.

All entrances were guarded today. Grace's widow, also a semi-invalid, was reported near collapse. Grace's son, Francis Joseph Morgan Grace Jr., arrived from San Francisco where he is an executive of the steamship corporation.

DEPOSED BISHOP CAUSES STIR IN OLD ST. JAMES'

W. Montgomery Brown Seeks Communion.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Bishop William Montgomery Brown of the Old Catholic church, deposed bishop of the Episcopal church, caused a stir early yesterday morning when he appeared at St. James' Episcopal church seeking communion. Bishop Brown was deposed for heretical utterances eight years ago. He has also been noted for his communistic writings and speeches.

The occasion of Bishop Brown's appearance at the historic near north side church was the semi-centennial corporate communion of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew which closed its 50th annual convention at a later service yesterday.

Leans on Arm of Attendant.

The prelate, who is 78 years old, with his flowing white hair, leaning on the arm of an attendant, slipped quietly into the church and took his seat in the famous "strangers' pew." At the time for communicants to go to the sanctuary rail to receive the sacrament, Bishop Brown and his attendant made their way forward surrounded by more than 200 delegates to the international brotherhood convention.

Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Chicago diocese was the celebrant at the service. He was assisted by Dr. Duncan H. Browne, rector of St. James', and the Rev. Harry L. Cawthorne. Bishop Brown was not barred from communion by the clergy.

It was recalled that Bishop Brown was entitled to communion, because the sentence of deposition, which was dramatically read at the general convention of the Episcopal church at New Orleans in 1925, did not carry the additional sentence of excommunication against him. At a meeting last week of the Fellowship of Faiths at the Morrison hotel, Bishop Brown declared his intention to seek restoration of his membership in the Episcopal house of bishops. Bishop Brown was the head of the Episcopal diocese or Arkansas from 1898 to 1912.

Hits 20th Century Christians.

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew convention was closed with a sermon by Bishop Frank E. Wilson of Eau Claire, Wis. Bishop Wilson declared that it will take a revolution to stir 20th century America out of paganism. He added that most people who call themselves Christians are sponges who make selfish use of their religion.

"The world is filled with admirers of Christ, but not by his followers," said Bishop Wilson. "To many people, the Christian religion is a social accessory compounded of second rate interest instead of power for actual use."

BANK CLERK SETS NEW RECORD FOR LOOPING A GLIDER

Charles F. Abel, a Federal Reserve bank clerk, yesterday broke the world's record for looping a motorless glider by turning 48 consecutive loops at Sky Harbor airport. Abel, piloting a Heath biplane glider, was towed to a height of 9,500 feet by Pilot Duane Howard, an instructor at the airport, in a Curtiss Fledgling biplane. At that altitude Abel cast off from the towing plane and began his series of loops, continuing until he was within a few hundred feet of the ground. The previous official record was 43 loops.

3 DIE IN PRISON CAMP OUTBREAK; POSSES HUNT 11

Convicts Shoot Way Out, Killing Two Guards.

Angola Penal Farm, La., Sept. 10.—(AP)—A sanguinary riot, started by twelve long term convicts during a prison baseball game here this afternoon, resulted in the death of two guards and a convict and the escape of eleven of the desperadoes in a visitor's automobile. A half dozen persons were wounded as the prisoners opened fire on the baseball crowd to cover their retreat.

One of the original twelve rioters was killed as the heavily loaded machine sped through the main gate of the penitentiary with its occupants firing at pursuers.

Arnold Daffs, trusty guard, and J. W. Fletcher, free guard, were slain in the prison yard in a vain defense of the prison armory, which was looted of guns and ammunition.

One of Convicts Killed.

The body of the convict slain in the dash through the gate was later found in the abandoned automobile on the edge of the 25,000 acre penal farm and identified as that of William Stone, 28, of Dallas, Tex.

Prison officials said tonight that the eleven escaped convicts were believed to have been surrounded by a posse of 300 men in a sugar cane field south of the farm.

The twelve men who hatched the escape plot took advantage of the distractions of the visitors' hour and interest in a baseball game between trusties and other convicts to surround Capt. John R. Singleton, in charge of the camp, and demand that he accompany them out of the prison. They were armed with pistols, for which officials were unable to account.

When Singleton refused, he was shot through the body and seriously wounded.

Kill Guards, Procure Arms.

With quick successive shots, the prisoners killed the guards, Davis and Fletcher, and over their bodies entered the armory, supplying themselves with shotguns, rifles and ammunition. They came out of the armory shooting and held at bay the hysterical crowd attending the baseball games, including several women visitors.

In mass formation and continuing fire, the prisoners moved across the prison yard and entered one of the visitor's parked automobiles. When it failed to start readily, they got out and piled in another machine, dashing off for the main gate.

Their car was struck at the gate by the rifle fire of L. M. Fournet, superintendent of the prison commissary and father of Lieut. Gov. John M. Fournet. One of their number was killed and at least one other was believed to have been wounded.

Officials who sought to broadcast a quick alarm to nearby towns found that telephone wires had been cut.

The Columbian Exposition opened May 1; A Century of Progress opened May 27.

BY EARL MULLIN.

Gov. David Sholtz of Florida arrived in Chicago yesterday. He will be a guest of honor at the World's Fair today when Florida day will be celebrated.

A large crowd is expected to attend the formal ceremonies in the Court of States since invitations were not restricted to native Floridians but included all Chicagoans who have been resort visitors in the southern state. An official proclamation was issued by the governor calling upon these visitors to avail themselves of the hospitality of the Florida exhibit during the day.

Program for Florida Day.

As a feature of the day's program the state exhibit will be presented to the Fair by Gov. Sholtz. It will be accepted on behalf of the Fair by President Rufus C. Dawes.

Starting at 11:30 a. m., the program will include speeches by W. F. Hodges, chairman of the Florida commission to the Fair; Nathan Mayo, Florida commissioner of agriculture, and civic leaders from the south.

Only 51 More Days Remain in Which to See the Fair.

At 11 a. m. the governor will be received in the Court of Honor at the 14th street gate and will review the U. S. army troops from Camp Whistler. No salute will be fired for the executive as this is his second visit to the Fair.

Pay Tribute to Perry.

Honors at the Fair yesterday were shared by Greek day and the historical pageantry commemorating the 120th anniversary of Capt. Oliver Hazard Perry's naval victory on Lake Erie in the war of 1812. The historical ceremonies, with Admiral Wat T. Cluverius as speaker of the day, were held in the Court of States. The high light of the ceremonies was the unfurling of Capt. Perry's battle flag bearing the dying statement of Capt. James Lawrence, "Don't give up the ship."

Between 15,000 and 20,000 Americans of Greek descent assembled in the court of the Hall of Science to take part in the colorful ceremonies of Greek day. The two major events of the ceremonies were the singing of the Greek chorus of Chicago under the direction of Maestro G. Sommas and a mass of the Greek Orthodox church.

Bishop Leads in Rites.

Fifteen priests, headed by Bishop Callistos, conducted the mass.

A five hour program of music, speeches and religious ceremonials was given under the supervision of Paul Demos, chairman of the day. Addresses were made by Charalambos Simopoulos, minister from Greece to the United States, and President Dawes of the Fair.

The day's attendance at the Exposition ran slightly higher than on Saturday. At 11:30 p. m. 146,304 persons had passed through the gates.

Caretaker of Fraternity House Commits Suicide

Richard Bond McIlhany, 70 years old, caretaker of the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity house at 5635 University avenue, ended his life yesterday by shooting himself with a shotgun. He left his wife, Katherine, and a son-in-law, Earl Lane of Peoria, on the first floor of the house while he went to his room on the third floor on the excuse of getting some papers. Then he shot himself.

ELEPHANT A REAL MARVEL TO OLD INDIAN OF WOODS

Fair Is Nice, but Giant of Zoo Wins Tibass.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Chicago is very big and A Century of Progress exposition is very nice, but what really interested Tibass St. Onge, old Indian chief from the Quebec forests, on the second day of his adventures in Chicago yesterday, was the tall elephant in Lincoln park zoo.

He had never had much conception of the world of cities, but he accepted elevators and towers, traffic jams and the jangled noise of it all with perfect equanimity. Sometimes he had to brace himself, and he never let his guides out of his sight for an instant, but it was the elephant that captured his deepest admiration.

Old Tibass Explains It.

"He is so big and he eats a loaf of bread out of my hand," was the explanation. The elephant and the Indian took a liking to each other at once and Superintendent Floyd Young let Tibass go inside the high fence and stand right under the yawning mouth during lunch time, when the elephant consumed a bale of hay and a bushel of bread.

The lions and tigers were interesting, too.

"Very hard to kill," commented the Indian, who has been a hunter and trapper in the big north woods all his life.

Up in his woods they have bears and caribou, wolves, and smaller game. When he arrived in Chicago Saturday night on The Chicago Tribune, paper boat from Shelter Bay, Quebec, logging headquarters for THE TRIBUNE'S 500 square miles of leased forest, his belongings were carried in a bag made of caribou skin. He wears ordinary store clothes, but his thoughts are not the thoughts of the city man. He sees no familiar landmarks here.

Here Without His Compass.

"Which way is north?" he was asked yesterday as he was sitting in the Fair grounds.

After some hesitation he pointed south.

At home in the woods he would have looked to see which way the tree tops bend or which side the moss grew on the trunks, or at least half a dozen other signs of the woodsman. He would have found his way. Here he was lost. He may have been dismayed or frightened, but he buried it under a stoical, unmoved expression. He was quick, however, to smile with pleasure, a child-like pleasure, on many occasions.

Magic mountain delighted him, and the skooter rides on Enchanted island. The sky ride was taken as a matter of course. The midget village enchanted him. He met Ludwig, the midget chief of police, and gazed down with utmost friendliness upon the pompous little man.

He Meets Duke Kuntu.

He was extremely courteous with Duke Kwesi Kuntu of the Ashanti tribe in the African village. Duke Kuntu had on a magnificent red robe and received Tibass in state in his grass hut. The talking drums of the African jungle, the wild fire dances, were watched with some appearance of tolerance and understanding.

The plantation dancers were enjoyed. The Hall of Science was nothing but a building. Ignorant? Not at all. Without knowing one word in the dictionary of all the sciences, without the faintest comprehension of machines, without being able to read or write English, Tibass is far from an ignorant man.

If he had been landed in the Quebec forests with the lost balloonists he would not have wandered lost and hungry as they did, subsisting on a few oranges. He would have had a comfortable home in half a day. If he were thrown naked into the woods he would survive, while all the learned professors would perish. It is entirely a matter of the point of view and what things are worth knowing.

Without knowing it, Tibass had one practical lesson in science. This was at the zoo, where he was shown the electric trap that kills flies. In other summers the deer and other animals have been bitten raw by swarms of flies. This summer they are living in comfort. On the doors and fences electric screens are stretched, alive with 3,500 volts of electricity. Every time a fly hits one of these screens there is a cracking sound and a flash. The fly has been electrocuted. There are heaps of dead flies and a constant crackling as the holocaust goes on.

The Field museum and the Shedd aquarium were also on Tibass' itinerary yesterday.

He stopped long before an exhibit in the Hall of Man at the museum. This showed a Kwakiutl house and a village on a rocky point near a salmon stream that runs into an arm of the sea on the northwest coast of America. This was so much like his own home before the pulp seekers built a town on the site.

The Background of Tibass.

To get the background of Tibas, it is recalled that in 1915, when the management of THE TRIBUNE decided to make its own newsprint, Col. Robert R. McCormick, the publisher, sent William Carter, an experienced Canadian explorer, on a voyage of discovery along the north shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Carter cruised in a small sailboat along a dangerous coast for hundreds of miles.

The booklet "Trees to Tribunes" gives this description of the finding of the future site of the town of Shelter Bay, now approaching a thousand in population:

"When, after a long and arduous voyage, Carter landed at the mouth of the aptly named Rocky river, the only person he met was an old Montagnais Indian named Tibass, who lived there with his family, hunting and trapping. The scene was typical of nature at her wildest.

Countless Millions of Trees.

"Sweeping down to the river banks and along the shores of the gulf as far as the eye could carry were countless millions of trees. A short distance up the river a mighty torrent of water crashed down a waterfall half a mile wide. A few hundred yards beyond that impressive sight was another fall, cleft by a sloping tree clad precipice, down which the river roared in white fury. Three miles to the north the land rose abruptly into a steep ridge that seemed to stretch endlessly from east to west.

"Outside of the barren rocks in the river and the narrow strip of sandy foreshore there was no solid space that was not covered with trees."

It was no wonder then that, as Tibass wandered through the marble halls and glass prisons of the museum, he stopped with a broad grin of delight at the case where white tailed deer were wandering in winter woods and the red birch stood bravely against the snow. This he knew. It was more than a pretty picture. It was life.

The tools and utensils of the Alaskan and other Indians interested him deeply. He picked out a flint fire stone from hundreds of objects. This also he had used.

A View of Earlier Man.

It was with polite wonder that he gaze dat the wonderful dioramas of earlier man in hall C of the museum. He discerned an elephant across the river from where the dawn man of 250,000 years ago crouched before his fire by the banks of a river and sharpened his spears. An elephant meant something to him, now that he had fed one a loaf of bread with his own hands.

He gazed long and earnestly at Neanderthal man of 50,000 years ago, clothed in skins, holding his club in protection of the woman and babies that hid in the seacoast cave at the dawn of family life. He could not believe how far mankind had come from that day until now.

Now he had many stories to tell his people. They would be believed because he told them. Such great things he could never have believed had he not seen with his own eyes. Such a welter of life. So many people doing so many different things, and in such a hurry. It would be a tale for the campfire next summer.

World's Fair Notes

Indiana women will celebrate "Daughters of Indiana" day at the Fair tomorrow. Their program includes a luncheon at the Blue Ribbon Casino and two lectures on Indiana in the state exhibit in the Hall of States. The lectures are to be at 1 and 3 p. m.

The Capital City band of Tallahassee, Fla., will play four concerts today and tomorrow at the Fair. Today's program includes concerts in the Court of States and in the Florida orange grove on Northerly island at 4 p. m. and 7:30 p. m., respectively. The band will play tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the Court of States and at 7:45 p. m. in the court of the Hall of Science. It is directed by Jan Koscielny of the Vienna Opera company.

Garner Curran will give a lecture tomorrow at 4 p. m. in the south lecture room of the Hall of Science on "The Romance of Old Ironsides."

Approximately 13,000 persons arrived in Chicago yesterday over the New York Central system, making necessary the use of 19 extra sections of regular trains and a special train from Jackson, Mich. The Exposition flyer of the Michigan Central road traveled in nine sections from New York and Boston, bringing 1,773 passengers to Chicago.

A hotel bureau will be opened today at the information desk of the 12th street entrance to the Fair by the North Shore Hotel association. Lists of rooms and apartments in more than 125 hotels on the north side which are members of this association will be available here.

Miss Lillian Anderson, who was chosen queen of A Century of Progress in THE TRIBUNE'S recent international charm contest, has been retained indefinitely as chairman of the reception committee at Johnson's Wax exhibit at the World's Fair, it was announced yesterday. Miss Anderson had been engaged for a week, but her popularity, officials announced, made an extension of that engagement necessary. Miss Anderson appears from 3:30 to 4:30 each afternoon at the wax exhibit. The exhibit is in the Home Planning hall.

A party of 200 from Kankakee, led by the Kankakee American Legion post drum and bugle corps, participated in a ceremony before the Pantheo de la Guerre yesterday to honor world war heroes of Kankakee county. The drum and bugle corps of the Kankakee post has won the Illinois state championship of the American Legion five times and is entered in the national contest to be held in Soldiers' field during the national Legion convention the first week in October.

Loeb and Leopold End Ninth Year in Prison

Today is the ninth anniversary of the commitment of Nathan F. Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb to the Stateaville penitentiary for the murder of Bobbie Franks on May 21, 1924. Leopold is still a clerk in the prison library. He has been placed in solitary confiement several times for minor infractions of the prison's rules. Loeb is conducting a correspondence school for inmates with the aid of other college bred convicts.

MEDICAL WHISKY PRICE SOARS ON VISION OF REPEAL

May Have to Import to Meet Drug Store Call.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Confidently expecting repeal within a few months, distilleries have virtually doubled their prices for medicinal whisky and even at such a level are, in many cases, refusing to part with their stocks of aged liquor.

The situation is such, in fact, that officials of the industrial alcohol division predict it may soon become necessary to import liquor to supply the demand of drug stores which has increased many times since the Celler law removed the old limitation upon the number of prescriptions a physician may issue.

Whiskies that three months ago were quoted at $30 to $40 for a case of twenty-four pints are now selling at a range of $60 to $72, wholesale. The price has gone to such a height that Dr. James M. Doran, chief of the division, believes that importers could almost match the domestic price even after paying the tariff of $5 a gallon.

Why They Keep Stock.

The purpose of the distillers in clinging to their pre-war liquors, officials of the division say, is this: If prohibition is repealed they will be free to multiply their stocks through "rectification," a process that the bootleggers call "cutting."

The bootleggers, in fact, borrowed this method from the distillers. The latter used it somewhat extensively but more skillfully before prohibition, officials say, although it was not generally known at the time. It consists of adding pure grain alcohol and other ingredients to aged liquor.

Using this method, the distillers could increase their supply, now between four and four and a half million gallons, many fold. The only limit, one official of the division said today, is "how much conscience and how much alcohol they may have."

Under prohibition, rectification is forbidden by the law under which medicinal whisky is produced.

Laws Resurrected.

Pondering the problem presented by the present shortage of medicinal liquor, Dr. Doran and two other treasury officials are preparing a compilation of the old laws, judicial decisions, and administrative rulings that would automatically become effective when prohibition is repealed.

They—the others are Capt. S. D. Bliss, in charge of miscellaneous internal revenue, and J. D. Nevius, general counsel of the customs bureau—were given the task by Acting Secretary Acheson, at President Roosevelt's request.

They have already determined that, lacking further legislation by congress, the internal revenue tax would be $1.10 a gallon and the tariff $5 for the same quantity. This tax figure is known as the "basic" rate. It was doubled and then tripled during the war. After prohibition a tax of $6.40 a gallon was imposed upon liquor diverted for beverage purposes.

This, the legal advisors of the internal revenue bureau say, will expire with prohibition, if it is repealed for then no question of diversion will be involved, and the tax will revert to the pre-war figure of $1.10.

The tariff rate is written into the Smoot-Hawley law and theoretically is and has been in effect and would apply if during prohibition liquor is imported for medicinal purposes. The figure is nearly twice that of 1913.

SEE THE FAIR NOW, AVOID RUSH, PLEA TO CHICAGO RESIDENTS

The Association of Commerce campaign to have business concerns designate certain days as employés' days at the Fair will get into full swing this morning with more than one hundred concerns already signed up. A printing of 100,000 posters designed by the association will be delivered this morning to stores and shops reminding Chicagoans that after today only 50 days remain in which they may visit the Exposition.

"Chicago people had better go to the Fair now if they wish to see it with comfort," said George W. Rossetter, president of the Association of Commerce, yesterday.

"The record of the old Fair shows that Chicago people waited for cool weather, and at the last were subjected to such crowded conditions that they could not see the various exhibits with any degree of ease."

Lenox R. Lohr, general manager of the Fair, yesterday completed a twelve day survey which shows that five out of six visitors to the Fair are from outside Chicago, and that seven out of ten visitors are from outside Illinois. On Friday, when the Children's day attendance swelled the total, the Chicago percentage rose to 23.2, the highest of the survey. The total survey showed an attendance percentage of 15.4 for Chicago and 28.4 for Illinois.

The survey was conducted by Boy Scouts, who questioned 205,336 visitors.

RECOVERY PLAN FACES ITS FIRST TRADE SLUMP

Usual Summer Lull Late in Arriving.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—The Roosevelt program has struck its first slump, and the President and all of his economic advisers are battling vigorously to prevent its cutting too deep.

For the first five months of the new deal there was a steady climb out of the slough of depression, and when the summer came and was mostly spent without halting the upward trend of business, many keen observers thought it too good to be true.

It now appears that the slump which ordinarily would have been here in the early summer, and would have been spent by now and the upward march resumed, has visited the country at an overdue time. The administration advisers are hopeful, and confident, that because of its late arrival it will be on its way the faster, and in a short time the surge upward will have begun with new vigor.

President Is Undaunted.

The President himself is undaunted and, far from shivering with doubts that the new deal is a misdeal, he is forging ahead, applying remedies continuously, as he did in the past months. He is pepping up steel by offering the railroads generous loans to buy rails; he would pump life into the latent building industry by inaugurating a nation wide housing program with the public works money.

He has urged the nation's bankers to relax restrictions on commercial credit, and, failing in this, he is searching for a means of providing government credit to business.

But his greatest reliance is in setting up the major industries of the nation on a firmer basis, eliminating competitive practices which were ruinous before. The President believes he has the oil industry on the way to a stable prosperity and the lumber trade in line for a good recovery. The steel industry, more self-contained than the others, will move as business moves, but that the President will aid them when he can is shown in his offer to help the railroads buy steel rails.

Auto Situation Pleasing.

Mr. Roosevelt has shown his pleasure over the booming condition of the automobile industry, and despite the ballyhoo over Henry Ford's defiance of the automobile code, the President really is not concerned over it. He is concerned over the fate of the coal industry, which is still uncoded and mired in bitter controversy.

The first official note of warning that a slower pace has developed in the onrush of business activity was issued today by the department of commerce. For weeks the slack has been apparent to all observers who follow the trend of production, prices and retail sales. Its depth cannot be measured accurately because of the sometimes exasperating slowness with which economic and industrial statistics become available.

The current report of the department of commerce records that "business activity has tended downward since the middle of July, although the recession has been moderate and has been due partly to belated seasonal influences.

Production Below Peak.

"Production in most of the major industries, including automobiles, steel, lumber, textiles, electric power, boots and shoes and tobacco manufacturing has fallen down below the peak, although in most of these industries the declines have not been pronounced. Usually there is a slight seasonal improvement in August, but this year the normal early summer down trend was delayed until the latter part of July."

Current statistical data for the week ended Sept. 2 reflect the decline in industrial production. Based on 1923-'25 as normal, the production of steel ingots in the week fell off four points from 64.5 to 60.5 per cent of normal. In the preceding week the production was 68.4 per cent. The falling off appears alarming, but not so much so when viewed against 1932, when production in the Sept. 2 week was 15.8 per cent of normal.

Automobile output fell to 57.5 per cent of normal in the Sept. 2 week compared with 65.6 on Aug. 26 and 70.7 on Aug. 19. Last year the output was 30.1 per cent.

Alongside these evidences of a slowing of productivity, however, may be put the greatly encouraging news that freight car loadings, always rated as a good index of business activity, in the week ended Sept. 2 were higher than in any week thus far in 1933.

Wheat receipts declined 2° per cent during the week, but cotton receipts went up sharply again from 57.3 per cent on Aug. 19 to 70.4 on Aug. 26 and 91.5 on Sept. 2.

Prices continued to rise, the wholesale price index of all commodities for the week, compared with 1926 as normal, being 69.7 per cent. Farm products dropped from 58.2 to 57.1 per cent, while all other commodities increased by slight percentages.

Here's Disturbing Element.

This boosting of all price levels except the farmers' is the most disturbing element in the administration's outlook, and it is generally charged to Gen. Johnson's NRA program. The code program has pushed costs of production higher, with a result that the cost of living is rising, the index being 75.2 as compared with 71.8 in March, 1933.

Secretary Wallace, alarmed over the results of the farmers' incomes lowering while his costs are rising, has been pushing his production control schemes in wheat, cotton, hogs and tobacco, but no appreciable beneficial effect to the farmers can be felt in the present year, it is believed.

In June, Gen. Johnson asserted that NRA would find jobs for 5,000,000 by Labor day, and that the public works program would employ a million more. He estimated himself, on Labor day, that some 2,000,000 had gone back to work, and no one can estimate how many have been employed on the public works program.

NO MEDDLING! U. S. WARNED BY NEW CUBAN CHIEF

Grau San Martin Takes Oath at Palace.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 10.—The inauguration of Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, 48 year old professor, as president of Cuba brought a tremendous crowd to the presidential palace at noon today. Soldiers cluttered the grounds and milled about inside the palace as the radical junta officially came to an end after being in the saddle for five days.

Leaders of the students' directorate of youthful radicals prefaced the ceremonies by protesting against recognizing the 1901 constitution. They contended that it had been wiped out by the revolution. Members of the Supreme court held a conference and solved the problem by administering an ordinary oath without reference to upholding the constitution.

Swears to Serve Republic.

Aurelia Alvarez, former president of the senate and a leader of the Conservative party, said:

"The president will swear to serve the republic and that is all."

"I swear and promise on my word of honor before the people of Cuba, legitimate representative of national sovereignty, to fulfill in all its parts the revolutionary program with maximum respect to all interests established here, and with fervent hopes for Cuban progress and welfare and for the most cordial relations with all countries that live in accordance with the forms of international juridic society. I swear before God and before the public conscience that my ideal and most cherished ambition is to comply faithfully with this oath."

Part of Cabinet Chosen.

Part of Grau San Martin's cabinet was announced as folllows:

Secretary of interior — Dr. Antonio Guiteras.

Secretary of treasury — José Barquin.

Secretary of war—Col. Julio Aguada.

Secretary of agriculture — Sergio Carbo.

Carbo was a member of the junta and the most radical individual in it. Secretary of Sanitation Finlay is a son of the late Cuban scientist who discovered that yellow fever was transmitted by the mosquito. He also isolated the only mosquito in the world capable of transmitting this disease. Secretary of Public Works Chibas held the same portfolio under the ousted president, Carlos Manuel de Cespedes. He is the only member of the De Cespedes government to be reinstated.

A few minutes after the oath taking, President Grau San Martin again appeared on the balcony with Col. Fulgencio Batista, the former sergeant who now is chief of staff of the army and who led the army coup d'état last Monday night. Batista and the new president embraced in the usual Cuban necking fashion.

"Will Not Tolerate Interference."

From the balcony which overlooks the American embassy at the foot of the Avenue of the Missions, the new president said:

"The government is in essence revolutionary. It will not tolerate under any circumstances the interference of the United States or any other foreign power in meddling with what all Cubans and the new government regard as national problems of the sole concern of Cuba.

"The people of Cuba seek the approval and coöperation of the people of the United States, but do not care about or are not particularly interested in obtaining the recognition of the government of any foreign power in particular."

The crowd understood this to mean the United States, which is the power most closely connected with the satellite republic, and it shouted its approval.

Other speakers followed in a similar strain. Carlos Prio Socarras, representing the students, said:

Nine More Destroyers on Way South.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Nine additional navy destroyers knifed their way in fleet formation toward Cuban waters tonight while administration officials here studied the possibilities of recognizing the island's new revolutionary government.

From within high councils came word that recognition might be accorded quickly, but that President Roosevelt was determined to insist upon complete proof that the new government could maintain order and protect life and property.

Should recent disorders in Cuba continue, or should Mr. Roosevelt consider that the Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin regime could not properly set Cuba's house in order, it was said, recognition would be delayed, if given at all.

"Recognition may come tomorrow, or it may come next week, or still again it might not come at all," was the way one administration advisor privately put it.

Only Silence Officially.

Officially, however, silence was maintained as far as affairs in the southern island were concerned. State department officers said no reports had been received during the day on the fast tumbling events in Havana and elsewhere, and when Ambassador Welles did report, officials here said it would not be a time for comment.

It was made increasingly plain, however, that the administratioin had no immediate intention of relaxing preparations for protecting American lives and property in Cuba should the need arise.

In addition to keeping the nine destroyers on their course for Cuban waters, United States navy chiefs shuffled the lineup of the ring of ships around the island. None of the 30 vessels already there or enroute was recalled.

The destroyer Bainbridge was ordered to leave its anchorage at Havana and after refueling at Key West proceed to Puerto Padre, on the northeastern coast of Cuba to stand beside the coast guard cutter Yamacraw, already on hand there. Officials said no trouble had been reported but that they were strengthening the line.

On Way to South Coast.

Th destroyer McFarland was en route to Cienfuegos on the southern coast today, but officers said the ship would act only as relief for the destroyer Overton already anchored at the reported trouble spot.

Eight of the additional destroyers moving toward Cuba today left Hampton Roads, Va., last night, while the ninth, the Reuben James, left that port only a little ahead of them.

Although moving in fleet formation, the war vessels will come to a parting of the ways tomorrow night. The destroyers Fairfax, Taylor, Claxton, and Hamilton will proceed on toward Guantanamo bay, Cuba, where the United States has a naval base. The Reuben James is headed there also.

The destroyers Ellis, Cole, Dupont, and Bernadou will swerve to the west and await further orders at Key West.

HERE IS THE CORRECT WAY TO PRONOUNCE CUBAN CHIEF'S NAME

ROOSEVELT BACK HOME; SILENT ON CUBAN SITUATION

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—(AP)—President Roosevelt returned to the White House tonight from a weekend cruise on the Potomac river, maintaining silence on the Cuban situation but watching it closely.

The President kept within easy range of the capital, was fully advised of developments throughout the day.

Reaching Washington at 6 o'clock he immediately went to the White House, but the fact that he had no conferences planned for the night indicated no great concern over the trend of Cuban affairs.

A high wind balked the plans of the President to do some fishing last night. Veterans of the Potomac sent word to the presidential yacht Sequoia that the fish were not biting.

James Roosevelt, eldest son of the President, accompanied him on the trip, together with Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, and Mrs. Hopkins, and Miss Marguerite Lehand, private secretary.

ELECTRICAL INSPECTORS TO MEET.

The five day convention of the International Association of Electrical Inspectors will open today at the Congress hotel with 500 municipal and insurance company electrical inspectors from all over the country in attendance.

CUBA GETS NEW PRESIDENT AND ALSO A REVOLT

of navy guns. Let's fight American capitalism and imperialism, which has strangled Cuba and Latin America for half a century!

"If need be, let agrarians, laborers, soldiers, peasants, sailors, and all the Cuban proletariat unite to fight Yankee imperialism if the marines set foot on Cuban soil."

Corporal Clemente Laza, son of the late Col. Leopoldo Laza, famous Cuban independence war veteran, said:

"Cubans, remember, there are still some guns, bayonets, and rifles in our hands ready to defend Cuban integrity and sovereignty against Yankee military, political, and economic oppression if the marines land."

Mobs Jeer U. S. Warship.

Along the waterfront crowds jeered at the cruiser Lexington and a destroyer in the harbor while wild eyed agitators screeched speeches to the mobs. Efforts to inflame the populace have been going on for days by ultra-radical disturbers who assert that the Americans are going to land marines and annex Cuba.

An effect on the lower grade Cubans who are not very intelligent is discerned in the anti-Americanism which suddenly bubbled over today.

Dr. Grau San Martin was picked for president early this morning by the old revolutionary groups and the junta. The junta had control of the island for five days after the throwing out of De Cespeces last Monday at midnight through the revolt in the army led by First Sergt. Fulgencio Batista, now a colonel and chief of staff of the army. San Martin's selection seemed to be a triumph for the student element in Cuba's social revolution.

Youths "Balance of Power."

Youths from 16 to 21 were much in evidence. They are not old enough to vote, but are vocative enough, apparently, to hold the balance of power in determining a provisional president.

In the foreground was the brain trust of the radical revolutionaries, in which Fascist views appear dominant, and supporting the movement were the more radical sectors of the revolution which originally aimed at the overthrow of Machado.

Sugar, however, above all the stormy hubblebubble retains its place as the crux of Cuba's politics. The main question worrying the new government is whether the United States will recognize it. Much doubt is expressed on this. The new government started out snapping its fingers at Uncle Sam, especially at the person of Ambassador Welles, saying at the outset it was against any foreign interference in Cuban affairs. But no recognition means no decrease in the sugar tariff and no economic recovery for the island.

The latest sport tonight in betting circles is wagering how long the new government will last. The army under the former court stenographer, Sergt. Batista, appears jittery without its regular officers who have refused to return to their posts. Three hundred and fifty are still encamped at the National hotel. They are armed with rifles, machine guns and sidearms.

An hour after Grau San Martin took his oath of office another report reached the palace that the officers were preparing to march down Malecon drive in the face of guns trained from La Punta, headquarters of the naval forces, and storm the palace. At once the palace gates were closed. Machine guns were mounted inside, and 10 feet from the gates soldiers were stationed behind barricades of sandbags. Other troops took stations on the roof and at windows and balconies.

Set Up Machine Guns.

Batista pranced around in Machado's old automobile with guards and soldiers armed with machine rifles of the Chicago gangster type used in the Valentine day massacre.

Truckloads of khaki clad soldiers sped along the Gulf of Mexico front and set machine guns near the Maine memorial, commanding all approaches to the National hotel.

Inside the hotel were the officers and about 200 members of the ABC, powerful revolutionary organization. The ABCs carried an assortment of arms. Some of the shotguns and pistols dated back to the days of Spanish rule.

Col. Ferrer, one of the leaders of the coup which disposed of Machado, as a representative of the barricaded army officers asked Welles if the United States would recognize the new government. He advised Welles that if Washington recognized the Grau San Martin government it would not stop the officers from trying to oust him and restore De Cespedes.

Welles, it was reported at the National hotel, told Ferrer that inasmuch as the United States refused to recognize the revolutionary junta there is not a possibility that it will recognize the new provisional government set up under auspices of the junta. Following this Ferrer called into conference such leaders of the anti-Machado revolution as Former President Mario G. Menocal and Gen. Carlos Mendieta. This is regarded as one start for another revolution.

Later the officers announced their refusal to recognize the new government. They branded it an offspring of the junta which they denounce as bolshevist. They said they would not return to their commands unless the army is put back on the old footing with the "bolshies" among the soldiers discharged.

You smoke a pipe

. . . and we'd like to talk with you about it

SINCE smoking a pipe is so different from smoking a cigar or cigarette, we made a scientific study in an effort to make a tobacco suited to pipes.

We found out that a kind of tobacco that grew in the Blue Grass section of Kentucky called White Burley was best for pipes.

We found out also that Mr. J. N. Wellman, many years ago, made a pipe tobacco which was very popular—and we acquired this Wellman Method. That is what we use in making Granger.

Next was the cut. Remembering how folks used to "whittle" their tobacco we cut GRANGER just like "whittle" tobacco—"Rough Cut." It smokes cooler and lasts longer.

So far, so good. Now we wanted to sell this tobacco for 10c. Good tobacco—right process — cut right. So we put Granger in a sensible soft foil pouch—easy to carry and keeps the tobacco just exactly right—just like it was made.

RUSSIAN HARVEST IS EXPECTED TO END STARVATION

Yields in Grain Producing Areas Are Great.

ROSTOV-ON-DON, U. S. S. R., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Evidences of a harvest sufficient to end danger of starvation in the great grain producing regions of the Ukraine and north Caucasus were observed by the Associated Press correspondent who arrived here today.

Traveling without official supervision from Moscow on the first trip permitted since the foreign office invoked rigid control of the movements of foreign newswriters, no signs of want or hunger were to be seen from the limited vantage points afforded by brief halts at a large number of stations.

Food in Abundance.

Whatever may have been the suffering endured last winter and spring—and even the most conscientious government supporters admit conditions were "very bad"—there is good reason to believe this year's bountiful crop will be more than enough to meet the needs of the country.

There were indications of food in abundance, scores of peasant women offering it for sale to travelers at every station. Large quantities of vegetables, fruits, milk, poultry, and eggs could be had at low prices.

On every hand the peasants' refrain seemed to be: "We've had a bad winter but the new crops pulled us through."

Gathering Harvest a Problem.

The cost of the recent food shortage in terms of human life is yet to be learned. It appears a certainty from superficial observations, however, that the government's rigid control over agriculture inaugurated this year together with the beneficence of nature have gone far to relieve the strain induced by previous crop failures.

The problem of gathering in the harvest still bulks large especially in view of inadequate transportation facilities.

In the north Caucasus, for example, only 43 per cent of the area sown to grain has been thrashed, the rest lying in the field subject to heavy loss in the event of prolonged rains.

On the other hand, the yields observed are so rich that even a relatively small percentage would be sufficient to keep the grain elevators working full blast.

WORLD FAIR CUTS INTO ATTENDANCE AT CITY BEACHES

Attendance of Chicagoans at the World's Fair during the summer has cut into the high attendance figures recorded at the municipal bathing beaches. A comparison of beach and natatorium attendance this summer as compared with last summer shows a decline of more than two million, Walter Wright, city superintendent of parks, recreation and aviation, said yesterday.

The municipal beach attendance from June to Labor day totaled 6,816,795 this summer, as compared with 9,168,082 for last summer. The comparative figures follow:

Rogers Park	436,910	383,680
Rainbow	3,167,933	1,432,654
Rocky Ledge	838,324	314,201
Street Ends	4,784,915	4,686,260
Totals	9,168,082	6,816,795

The natatorium attendance during the summer just ended totaled 284,961, as compared with the 1932 figure of 420,792. The comparative figures:

Natatorium.	1932.	1933.
Bellfuss	192,485	121,335
Griffith	63,030	54,113
Jackson	165,277	109,513
Totals	9,168,082	6,816,795

AUSTRALIA EYES ROOSEVELT NRA; HAD IT FOR YEARS

Finds 'New Deal' Parallel to Labor Movement.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 10.—President Roosevelt and his NRA are the two most important subjects in the Australian press today, taking prominence in news and editorial columns over the Irish political situation and never-ending propaganda for cancellation of the "post-war" debts to the United States.

The man in the street, the executive, the laborer and the wife of the factory employé are all engrossed in discussing the merits or their skepticism of Mr. Roosevelt's recovery act. Economists and business leaders talk about it over the radio every night.

Parallels Labor Movement.

Australia's keen interest in President Roosevelt's "new deal" and the operation of the NRA lies in the fact that fundamentally it parallels quite closely the tenets and actual operation of the labor movement here over the last 30 years. Mr. Roosevelt's plan of rehabilitation may be termed "artificial" and "inflationary," but there stands the example of the success of minimum basic wages, 40 hours per week, the former eight hour day and other restrictions in Australia.

Other features of the "new deal" which have been written into the state and federal statutes of Australia for years are workers' compensation for injuries, child endowment insurance for the poor, old age pensions, arbitration courts to settle labor disputes, vast public works program to supplant the dole, state supervision of local government finances, development of roads and in some cases electric power by states, creation of state boards of health in place of local, and, most important of all, relief in reduced interest charges on mortgages and bank loans under various state moratorium acts.

Where the NRA is an emergency measure in America for a maximum period of two years, Australia's apparent socialization schemes are written into the law and are more or less supported by the two major political parties, Labor and the new United Australian party.

"Basic Wage" Propounded in 1890.

The minimum wage law, termed the "basic wage" in Australia, dates back to 1890, when it was propounded by Sir Samuel Griffith, premier of Queensland. At that time he declared:

"It is the duty of the state to make provision by positive law for securing the proper distribution of the net products of labor in accordance with the principles hereby declared—namely: that the measure of wages can never be taken at a less sum than such as is sufficient to maintain the laborer and his family in a state of health and reasonable comfort."

It was not until 1907, however, that the minimum wage principle was written into the statutes of Australia. Then a basic wage of about $10 a week was adjudged reasonable for "a family of about five" by the commonwealth court of conciliation and arbitration. Then and there was established in law the principle of a basic wage which became the bulwark of the Australian labor movement throughout the length and breadth of the land, until today every state has a basic wage for every class of work.

Federal Wage Law.

Even the federal government established a minimum wage in 1920 to be operative in parts of Australia not affected by state awards. The federal minimum wage law, however, has come into serious conflict several times with state awards and former Prime Minister Bruce's proposal in parliament in 1929 to throw the onus of minimum wage arbitration back to the states cost his government defeat when the issue was placed before the people.

Where some states set a minimum wage for a 40 hour week the federal statute cites a 44 hour week for employés working anywhere in Australia under certain federal awards.

The basic wages fixed by state arbitration tribunals operating under federal and state arbitration acts varied from time to time according to changes in cost of living, constitution of the family unit and the like. In brief, the "basic wage" in Australia is understood to mean the lowest wage which can be paid to an unskilled laborer on the basis of "the normal needs of an average employé regarded as a human being, living in a civilized community."

Basic Wages Listed.

Here are the latest basic wage figures per week in various Australian states:

New So. Wales	£3 5s	[ap. $16.00 at par]
Victoria	£3	[ap. $15.00 at par]
Queensland	£2 15s	[ap. $13.00 at par]
South Australia	£2 15s	[ap. $13.00 at par]
Tasmania	£3 2s 6d	[ap. $15.50 at par]
West Australia	£3	[ap $15.00 at par]

The above figures apply to "unskilled laborers." Workers in various skilled trades receive higher minimum wages that are determined by tribunals and written into the state laws from time to time.

In addition to the basic wage New South Wales has a special child endowment act which provides for a state payment of five shillings [about $1] per week to a family for each child under certain provisions. The fund from which these payments are made is maintained by a special tax of 2 per cent on the wage bill of employers. All workers in New South Wales also must pay to the state for unemployment relief the equivalent of 25 cents in every $5 earned in wages each week in addition to state and federal income tax.

Australian labor in 1871 gave to the world the principle of the 8 hour day, to which a monument still stands in the heart of Sydney. The 8 hour day is celebrated every October throughout Australia. Only recently the 8 hour day movement was changed to the "6 hour day." The state Labor party in New South Wales, headed by J. T. Lang, has advocated a 30 hour week for several years.

Old Age and Invalid Pensions.

Decentralization of industries, so strongly advocated in Mr. Roosevelt's "new deal," has been a tenet of Australian labor for many years. The movement of decentralizing industry to various parts of the country had its objective in quicker and more progressive development of the country's resources and transportation facilities and to stop the overcrowding of cities on the Australian coast line.

The Australian government also has the old age and invalid pension system of sums ranging from $5 to $8 per week to all destitute persons over 60 years of age. Invalids whose disabilities are contracted in Australia also receive weekly pensions. Mothers also receive from the state the sum of $25 as a gift maternity allowance for every child born in Australia.

FORD RESTING, SAYS NOTHING OF CODE POLICY

Big Bay, Mich., Sept. 10.—(AP)—There were no signs of activity today at Henry Ford's Huron Mountain camp, where he has been on vacation for three weeks, and nothing to indicate he expected to be back in his Dearborn office tomorrow.

At Detroit, the only Ford Motor company official who could be reached said he had no definite word as to when "the chief" would return.

No early change in the Ford Motor company attitude toward the NRA, nor any immediate official elucidation of policy is expected even when Ford returns to his office.

Progress in the treatment of disease by physical therapy is to be recounted at the twelfth annual meeting of the American Congress of Physical Therapy which will open today in the Palmer House. More than 1,500 specialists are expected to attend the convention. In the five day session 116 papers are to be read and 50 clinics will be held in eight Chicago hospitals.

END NRA STRIKE OF POCKETBOOK WORKERS' UNION

Try to Settle Millinery Union Walkout Today.

One NRA strike involving 1,000 workers was settled last night. Efforts to settle another strike affecting 4,500 employés are to be made today upon the arrival of Max Meyer, national labor board representative, who is being sent here by the recovery administration as an arbitrator.

The strike ended was that of the members of the International Pocketbook Workers' union who walked out a week ago. Representatives of the union and the manufacturers' organization, the Midwest Handbag association, signed a wage contract subject to the adoption of the pocketbook makers' code in Washington this week. Workers will return to their jobs today, it was announced.

Wages Above Code Minimum.

The new agreement provides for a wage scale 25 per cent above that of the NRA minimum for a 40 hour week, recognition of the union, division of work in slack periods and arbitration of disputes between workers and employers. Samuel Laderman, union organizer, declared this is the first time union conditions have been established in Chicago shops. James Mullenbach, NRA arbitrator for the Chicago-Milwaukee sector, acted as mediator.

Meyer to Hold Meeting.

Mr. Meyer, who recently settled the strike of 8,000 garment workers, will meet at 11 a. m. today at the Bismarck hotel with employers and union representatives of the 4,500 millinery workers who have been on strike since Aug. 29.

The Millinery Employers' association has announced that shops would reopen today and that 90 per cent of their employés would return to work. Miss Carolyn Wolfe, union organizer, declared last night that the strikers would be in the picket lines today and not at their jobs.

LOS ANGELES GETS QUAKEPROOF VAULTS FOR COUNTY RECORDS

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Los Angeles county officials have announced completion of an earthquake-proof, fireproof, floodproof system of vaults in San Fernando valley, which will store the most valuable county records.

The action was taken as a result of the condemnation and dismantling of the old Hall of Records, following the March 10 earthquake. According to County Surveyor John E. Rockhold, it is intended to prevent legal complications in case the records were destroyed by eathquake or fire.

The new earthquake-proof vault is three miles this side of the city of San Fernando, on property the county has owned fifteen years. It is approximately seventeen miles from the present courthouse. Investigation by engineers showed that this site has no underlying earthquake faults.

There are reports other vaults will be constructed in the vicinity to house records of real estate transfers and other legal data concerning sales and purchase of land in the county. Some of these records date back almost to the signing of the 1848 treaty of Guadeloupe Hidalgo in which Mexico ceded California to the United States. At or about that time many famous Spanish ranches suddenly became property of founders of native son families without court record.

COAL MINE MEN ASSAIL CODE IN CAUSTIC WORDS

They See Loss of Rights of Management.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Sharper language than Gen. Hugh S. Johnson has been forced to read and criticisms of his coal code amounting almost to plain ridicule are contained in a series of objections to the code filed with the NRA boss today by the two large nonunion groups of soft coal mine operators.

The letter transmitting the operators' objections to the code laid down last Thursday by Gen. Johnson is bristling with adjectives characterizing the code as "visionary," "impractical," "unwieldy," "unworkable," "sketchy," "veriest mockery," "ambiguous," "paternalistic."

The objections take up space twice as long the code itself. So violent is the protest of the operators, addressed to practically every paragraph of the code that observers were brought to the conclusion that Gen. Johnson is still many miles away from his goal of producing an agreed code for the bituminous coal industry.

Johnson Still Hopeful.

Gen. Johnson, however, issued a statement today repeating his confidence in an early agreement and despite the strong language of the nonunion operators, which he characterized as "a few rather extreme statements, not unusual in highly adversary briefs," he said in his today's communique:

"From the coöperative, conciliatory, and reasonable attitude now governing both sets of negotiations, I feel justified in saying that my confidence in our ability to get a proper agreed code and a satisfactory settlement has not been shaken."

A public hearing on the code, at which the objections will be heard, is to be held next Tuesday afternoon. The general's use of adjectives in describing the attitude governing the present negotiations was in the face of the fact that he knew the coal operators had given their letter of strenuous objection to the newspapers, in contravention of the usual procedure.

70 Per Cent Represented.

The letter was presented by the Northern Coal Control association and the Smokeless and Appalachian Coal association, representing 70 per cent of the soft coal operators, and since their consent must be obtained if a voluntary code is to be applied the language of their complaint augured ill for the general's optimistic assertions.

The remaining operators, most of whom recognize the United Mine Workers, have filed various objections to the code also, but their protests, with the exception of Alabama operators, can be much more easily reconciled, it is reported. The United Mine Workers has also proposed changes in the Johnson code, but on the whole is reported as favorable to it.

The objections of the leading nonunion operators laid a charge that the code would turn their mines over to the control of labor and of government, and deprive managements of their long honored rights of property.

Fear Loss of Control.

At the outset, the letter of protest asserted that the code "deprives the owners of the property of practically all of the rights of management."

"It will destroy," the objections stated, "any efficient and economical methods of production and management, and result in such high cost as to be unfair to coal consumers who must use coal, and drive all consumers who can get substitute fuels to abandon the use of coal.

"The code, as submitted, vests practically all of the functions of management as to production and operation of the mines in organized labor and vests the other functions of management, which pertain to marketing, the establishment of prices and the general conduct of the business of the industry, either in a committee of the industry as a whole on which the 70 per cent of the production which were present has but a small voice, or in the government as represented by the administrator or agencies established by him. Illustration of this transfer of management from the owners and operators of the properties is found in almost every paragraph of the code."

Labor Provisions Attacked.

The labor provisions of the Johnson code are violently attacked by the objectors, who charge that the provisions are designed for operation only in connection with a labor union.

"The rights of the individual employé or groups of employés are nowhere recognized or provided for," the letter states. "In the third paragraph of article 111, the code as proposed, goes so far as to refer to 'workers who are organized in the manner required in section 7-A of the national industrial recovery act,' although, of course, the provisions of section 7-A do not require that the workers be organized, but only permits such organization while expressly recognizing the right of the individual to contract for himself."

The objectors declare that under the Johnson code, the setup of a national committee to administer the code is unfair to their groups, and that while representing 70 per cent of production, they would have but 10 per cent of representation on the committee.

Declared Rights Infringed.

Curtly then the letter asserts that "the code undertakes to regulate matters which are not committed to the control of the federal government and which infringe upon the constitutional right of private contract."

An illustration cited is that the code gives the administrator the right to make regulations under which debts between employers and employés shall be paid.

The separation of the industry into five divisions, as provided in the code, is also attacked by the objectors on the ground that the division is not practical. The fixation in the code of minimum wages for "inside" mine workers as well as common outside laborers is objected to on the ground that in other codes only a minimum wage for workers generally is applied.

The manner of fixing maximum hours of work proposed in the Johnson code is attacked as bound to result in "greatly increased costs of production, loss of business in coal, and increased idleness, unemployment, and loss of wages."

Strenuous objection is made to a provision in the code calculated to permit employés in any mine to share the available work with unemployed workers, the authority for ordering distribution of the work to rest in a "mine adjustment committee" of employers and workers.

This paragraph, the objectors state, "means an abdication by the operator from the mine management and the turning over of the matter of hiring employés and their representatives. It is destructive of proper and efficient management and should not be in serious contemplation by the authorities.

"If we are to continue to operate our mines, this paragraph must necessarily be eliminated. Otherwise, as owners of these properties, we can not be responsible for either the safety of the employés or the control and management of the properties."

The much discussed and much fought over question as to whether codes may include a clause to permit employers the right to hire and fire employés on their merit and efficiency is raised emphatically by the objectors.

Want Right to Hire, Fire.

"The necessity for including such a clause in the code becomes more evident every day," their letter states. "Notwithstanding the interpretations of the act that have been made in public statements by the administrator, much confusion still exists in the lay mind as to whether or not the recovery act requires unionization of labor or a closed shop or an open shop.

"Such confusion evidently exists in the minds of the administrator's own staff, since the code proposed refers to 'workers who are organized in the manner required in section 7-A of the act.' Thus, it appears that the draftsman of the proposed code believed that such organization was required.

"If this confusion exists in the minds of the administrator's own staff, it is easy to understand the extent of the confusion that must exist in the minds of miners and other lay classes. We still insist that this clarifying clause must be included in any code of fair competition to which we are to agree. A similar statement in the automobile code has been approved by the administrator and the President and there is even more reason for its inclusion in this code."

U. S. IS NEARING MILLION MILES OF PAVED ROADS

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—At the present rate of construction the United States will soon have a million miles of surfaced highways. At the end of 1932, according to Owen B. Augspurger, president of the Automobile Club of New York, there were approximately 875,000 miles of surfaced roads suitable for motor travel. Of these about 275,000 were state highway systems.

"There is a total of 3,040,000 miles of highways in the United States," Mr. Augspurger said yesterday, "of which 360,000 are on state systems and 2,680,000 are county or local roads."

The state systems include 200,000 miles of interstate highways covered by the federal aid system.

SEIZE 30 TRUCK DRIVERS IN WAR ON HARD TIRES

Police arrested thirty drivers of trucks equipped with hard rubber tires during the twenty-four hours ending at 6 o'clock last night, according to Lieut. David Flynn, chief of traffic. Motorcycle policemen were ordered yesterday to arrest such violators throughout the city, but comparatively few trucks were on the roads. Approximately seventy-five drivers of trucks with hard tires will be arraigned before Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland in the Traffic court today.

BALLOON PILOTS TELL OF FIGHTING WAY FROM WILDS

Live on 12 Oranges on 5 Day Trek in Canada.

BY GORDON ROBERTS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

QUEBEC, Que., Sept. 10.—The two Polish pilots who left Chicago eight days ago with other pairs in the James Gordon Bennett balloon race and turned up only yesterday at the village of Riviere à Pierre, sixty miles northwest of here, told their story today.

For five days the pair—Capt. Franczek Hynek and Lieut. Zbiginew Burzynski—wandered aimlessly in the dense forests of Quebec province in their struggle back to civilization. They had 12 oranges between them for food. They met no one, saw few signs of human life. At night they were forced to sleep in the open. They walked nearly 100 miles in the Quebec wilds before they finally came upon a railway track and found their way to food and warmth at a French Canadian settlement.

Covered 840 Miles.

The Polish balloonists, interviewed by long distance telephone today, estimated they had covered 840 miles and were in the air 39 hours 30 minutes.

"Our balloon landed in a tree at 10:48 a. m. Monday [Chicago time], due to lack of air," said Lieut. Burzynski. "We had covered over 1,400 kilometers [about 840 miles], which we think is a new record. We clambered out of the basket, carefully taking with us a dozen oranges—all that remained of our stock of provisions, and began to walk.

"For five solid days we walked through dense forests, not sighting a single soul until we struck railroad tracks at noon yesterday. There we found that we were near a village named Lemieux. We were warmly greeted there after the amazement that our appearance aroused had subsided, and we were given hot food, the first we had tasted for over a week.

Await Consul.

"We were then driven in comfort to Riviere à Pierre, 12 miles distant, where we are housed, awaiting the arrival of our consul, who will instruct us as to our future movements."

"Was the balloon damaged in landing?" the Pole was asked.

"No, not at all, but I think they will have to send a monoplane or hydroplane to salvage it, for it is in a dense forest and will be hard to find from the ground."

Questioned as to how far from Riviere à Pierre they had actually landed, Lieut. Burzynski said he thought it was about 100 miles to the northeast. He was of opinion that minerals in the region had affected their compass, however.

Sleep by Camp Fires.

"All I know is that we walked through forests for five days, suffering mostly from hunger, for all we had were those dozen oranges. Each night we slept out in the open beside a campfire which we made. Each of us would mount guard in turn, one sleeping for an hour and then waking the other, who would watch to see that nothing happened.

"We didn't see a soul during the whole of our march, but the third day after we landed we saw a lake and a canoe in which there was some fishing tackle. As there was no road leading to the lake, however, we couldn't approach it and find out how far we were away from a village. [This must have been Lake Willbridge, where a balloon was reported seen last week].

"We allotted ourselves an orange each a day, but that was all, except that there was plenty of water. We saw lots of game but we could not kill anything for we had no firearms.

Welcome Railroad Tracks.

The railroad tracks were a welcome sight and when we sighted them yesterday we knew that we were not very far from a village. The 12 miles to Lemieux were covered in record time, and from there to Riviere à Pierre we journeyed in an automobile which was luxury after our hiking experiences through trackless forests.

"Last night we slept in comfortable beds, between clean sheets, and now all we have to do is to eat our fill and wait for the consul."

The balloonists did not meet either of the search parties sent out by the province of Quebec yesterday, although they must have passed within a few miles of each other.

Macon Joins Search Today.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—The navy dirigible Macon, newest and largest of the world's lighter than air craft, is under orders to take off tomorrow from Lakehurst airport to join in the search for the two missing balloonists, Ward T. Van Orman and Frank A. Trotter. They took off a week ago yesterday in the annual Bennett cup race from Chicago, and are the only team still unreported.

It is believed that, like the Polish team of Capt. Franczek Hynek and Lieut. Zbigniew Burzynski, who reached civilization yesterday after landing their balloon in the wilds of Quebec, that the Americans may have come down in their Goodyear IX. at some point far in the wilderness.

Van Orman was the most experienced of all the pilots in this year's contest, having won it three times before. He carried a rubber raft which could be inflated for use in case of landing on water, and also a month's provisions, firearms and fishing tackle.

Hunt Atlantic for Van Orman.

Boston, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Coast guard craft, aided by a service amphibian plane, today continued to search the New England coast, from Martha's Vineyard to Portland, Me., for Ward T. Van Orman and Frank Trotter, missing James Gordon Bennett balloon race contestants. The search was extended 200 miles out to sea.

Fail to Find Trace of Balloonists

COAST GUARDS DRAG LAKE FOR LOST AUTOGIRO

Two coast guard cutters and a half dozen yachts yesterday were dragging a mile square area three miles off Michigan City in a search for the autogiro plane which disappeared with three occupants Wednesday in a flight from South Bend to Chicago. The plane was piloted by Charles T. Otto of Haverford, Pa. His companions were Miss Majenta Gerard, 7617 Washington boulevard, River Forest, and H. E. [Spud] Manning, noted parachute jumper.

The cutters were sent to the area by Capt. H. R. Searles of the coast guard at the request of Capt. B. B Lipsner, veteran airmail pilot. Lipsner said that Leonard Pascale, who lives on a 75 foot cliff overlooking the area, reported that he and his wife and four children saw the craft fall into the water about 11 a. m. Wednesday morning.

Among the yachts engaged in the search is the Mizpah, owned by Commander Eugene MacDonald of Chicago. Commander MacDonald broadcast reports of the progress of the search. The broadcasts were received here by W. D. Ferrel of 555 North Laramie avenue, operator of the amateur radio station W8CGV.

Robbers Slug and Shoot Attendant in Loop Garage

Ralph Clasty, night attendant in the North Loop Motoramp garage, 70 West Lake street, was slugged and shot early yesterday by three bandits who robbed him of $34. The men knocked Clasty down with the butt of a shotgun and, as they left, fired a charge at the floor. Several of the slugs struck Clasty in the arm.

Farmers Make Sacrifices to Gods to Halt Epidemic

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad, Sept. 10.—(AP)—A mysterious epidemic of cattle deaths puzzling superstitious farmers has broken out in the neighborhood of a deserted airport 14 miles from here. The epidemic is believed to have been caused by vampire bats. Farmers are resorting to sacrifice to appease the wrath of the gods.

WETS PREDICT MAINE WILL O. K. REPEAL TODAY

tory if a heavy vote is polled. Gov. Olson, a repealist who has declined to urge ratification, has predicted the state would go wet. About 700,000 persons are expected to vote. The state will be under local option if repeal wins. The city polls open at 6:30 and the country polls at 9; all close at 8 p. m.

Two states will vote on ratification next week, two next month, and six on Nov. 7, bringing the total voting by Nov. 8 to 39. The conventions will be held at a later date. The 36th convention is scheduled for Dec. 6. In addition to the states voting tomorrow and Tuesday the next states and their dates are:

Sept. 19—Idaho and New Mexico.
Oct. 3—Virginia.
Oct. 10—Florida.
Nov. 7—Kentucky, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Utah.

Colorado Signs Are Wet.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 10.—(AP)—This state, which votes on repeal Tuesday, was regarded as dry until the general election last November. At the 1932 election, however, the people voted by a plurality of 50,540 to strike the state prohibition amendment from the constitution and wipe all liquor laws from the statute books.

Farley Presses Wet Fight.

New York, Sept. 10.—James A. Farley, postmaster general, and chairman of the Democratic national committee, said he had no hesitancy tonight in saying Maine would vote "overwhelmingly" for repeal.

"The people of that state feel exactly as do the voters in the twenty-five other states that have already expressed their desires on repeal," he said. He told of sending telegrams to Colorado, Maryland, and Minnesota, asking for a favorable vote on repeal when those states go to the polls Tuesday.

DOCTOR CALLS ILLNESS OF BOY SLEEP SICKNESS

A 3 year old boy was taken to the county hospital last night, supposedly a victim of encephalitis, or sleeping sickness. Another case was reported in Evanston two days ago. The disease recently struck St. Louis, causing 114 deaths.

The boy is Benjamin Arkow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Arkow, 3245 West 15t hstreet. They took him to Mount Sinai hospital last evening. Dr. Charles Berkowitz, a resident physician, diagnosed his sickness as encephalitis and ordered him removed to the county hospital. Doctors there refused to say the boy was a sleeping sickness victim. Several days must elapse before the sickness can be absolutely diagnosed, they said.

The other suspected encephalitis sufferer is Andrew G. Fraser, 46 years old, Evanston druggist, now in St. Francis hospital, Evanston. Fraser entered the hospital Wednesday. His physician, Dr. Junius C. Gregory, said Fraser's ailment resembles some form of sleeping sickness, but not necessarily the type prevalent in St. Louis.

FIND ATTORNEY SLAIN IN AUTO NEAR GOLF CLUB

Palo Alto, Cal., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Alan Crocker Van Fleet, socially prominent San Francisco attorney, was found dead in his motor car near the Menlo Country club today, a bullet hole through his head.

He had been missing since yesterday afternoon, when he told his wife, Mrs. Alice Van Fleet, he was going to the club to play golf. He was a son of the late Judge William C. Van Fleet of San Francisco.

EIGHT MORE DIE OF AUTO INJURIES; THREE CHILDREN

Fatalities Increase 1933 Toll to 722.

Three children and five other persons died yesterday of injuries received in automobile accidents. The eight deaths increased the Cook county motor fatality toll to 722 since Jan. 1. The victims:

Raymond Louer, 8 years old, 3341 North Kilpatrick avenue. Fatally injured when the automobile in which he was riding with his father, Edward, and his mother and sister collided at Irving Park boulevard and Cumberland road with a car driven by Harry Kratitz, 3943 West 14th street. He died at Belmont hospital. The other members of the Louer family were slightly hurt by the collision in which both cars overturned. Kratitz and Miss Ann Bennett, 3625 Leland avenue, his companion, were uninjured. Kratitz was held for the inquest today.

Henry McIntyre, 7 years old, 1537 Cleveland avenue, died in the Evangelical hospital of injuries received Friday when an automobile driven by Arthur Kennitz, 1823 Prairie avenue, struck him as he was playing in the street near his home. Kennitz was charged with assault with a deadly weapon.

Patricy Lowe, 7 years old, 8318 Manistee avenue. Died in the county hospital of injuries received when he was struck by an automobile Saturday at 90th street and South Chicago avenue. Carl Westerton, 9721 Houston avenue, told police that a hit and run driver struck the boy first, knocking him into the path of his car.

Dennis O. Carey, 25 years old, 70 East 155th street, Harvey, a World's Fair employé. Died last night in Roseland Community hospital of injuries received Saturday when he lost control of his automobile and crashed into a pole in front of 12078 South Halsted street.

Herman H. Doll, 60 years old, 6718 Odell avenue. Died in Passavant hospital of injuries received Thursday in a collision at Superior street and Wabash avenue.

Joseph Ganya, 62 years old, 721 Uhland street. Died in Passavant hospital of injuries received Saturday when he was struck at La Salle and Oak streets by an automobile driven by Anthony Kunzer, 5336 Cornell avenue.

Louis Steege, 75 years old, 4507 Parker avenue. Died in the Danish American hospital of injuries received Sept. 5 at Diversey and Kilbourne avenues, where he was struck by an automobile driven by Arnold Brosley, 2933 73d court, Elmwood park.

An unidentified man. Killed last night when he stepped in front of a car driven by Louis Karoff, 28 years old, 1259 South Keeler avenue, at 18th street and the Outer drive.

Funeral services for South Park Policeman William Hoard, 40 years old, 3118 West 57th street, who was killed early yesterday in a motorcycle accident, will be held at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday from the home of his sister, Mrs. Lillian Mearns, 5817 South Spaulding avenue. Burial will be in Evergreen cemetery. Policeman Hoard was killed while chasing a speeder on the outer drive, opposite the 23d street entrance to the World's Fair. Traveling at 70 miles an hour, his motorcycle struck the automobile of Sterling Peacock, 2645 Orrington avenue, Evanston, as Peacock drove out of a parking lot.

REVEAL SECOND MARRIAGE OF BYRON PUTMAN

Byron E. Putman, Wheaton electrical engineer, whose divorce proceedings against his first wife six months ago attracted public attention, has remarried, it was learned yesterday. The marriage took place on Labor day in Chicago. His bride is the former Mrs. Mary Voight Beadford, a resident of Wheaton and a former employé of a Chicago bank. Friends said that they are on a honeymoon from which they will return to Putman's home at 814 Ellis avenue, Wheaton.

Putman was granted a divorce in February from his first wife, Mrs. Adelaide Putman. He charged that his 115 pound wife interrupted his concert playing by beating him on the head with the heel of her slipper.

Mrs. Putman filed a crossbill in which she charged that her husband had devised a number of electrical appliances for spying on her, including a timing apparatus attached to the front door to record the time at which she returned home at night. She allowed her husband to get the divorce as a result of a settlement out of court.

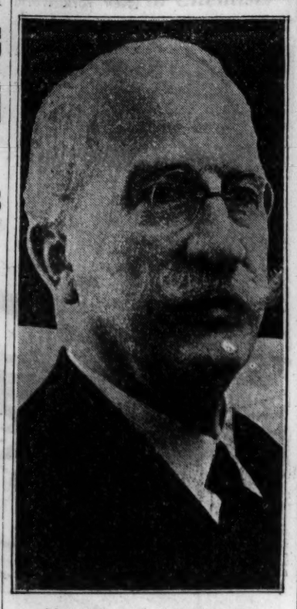
SEEKING CABINET



ALEJANDRO LERROUX.

LERROUX HOPES TO FORM SPANISH CABINET TODAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, Spain, Sept. 10.—Spain tonight was still without a cabinet, Alejandro Lerroux, who had been named by President Alcala Zamora to form a government, was unable to break down the hostile front shown by parties which participated in the ousted pro-Socialist government of Premier Manuel Azana. He was still optimistic, however, that he would succeed tomorrow.

Lerroux went over the heads of party leaders and appealed to members to join a cabinet composed of personalities rather than parties, but this move also failed. Among those who refused to sign up in a régime headed by the veteran republican leader were Salvador de Madariaga, Spanish ambassador to Paris, and Felipe Sanchez Roman, one of the best known lawyers in Spain.

Reports tonight indicated that right wing candidates are winning in the elections held today by the colleges of lawyers in all provinces to elect two representatives to the tribunal of constitutional guarantees. Jose Calvo Sotelo, former minister of finance under the dictatorship of Primo de Rivera, is the monarchist candidate, and his alternate is Dr. Albinana, leader of the Spanish Fascist movement.

3 ARE KILLED AS TRAIN HURLS AUTO ON THEM

Goshen, Ind., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—A mother and her two daughters were killed here this morning when an automobile from which they had leaped after it had stalled on the track was struck by a New York Central passenger train and hurled upon them. A son received a broken leg. The husband and father was uninjured.

Those killed were Mrs. Kathryn Zollinger, 46, of Goshen and her daughters, Louise, 18, and Esther, 11. The injured son is Joseph Zollinger. The father is Clint Zollinger.

Zollinger said the family was en route to a nearby lake for a picnic with the son at the wheel when the car stalled on the track on College avenue road, three and a half miles southeast of Goshen. When he saw the train approaching Zollinger ordered his family out of the car.

The onrushing train sent the wreckage of the auto hurtling onto the wife and daughters and a piece of it struck the son.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE REAL ROAD TO RECOVERY.

A Harvard professor has just discovered that the widely held belief that actual consumption of goods by consumers is severely curtailed during depressions is a misconception. He found that the ultimate consumer used almost as much food, clothing, household furnishings and miscellaneous merchandise in 1931 and 1932 as in the best years.

The national administration has as its declared objective the raising of the level of consumption by the mass of people. The Harvard investigation shows that the full attainment of the present purpose will not bring full or lasting prosperity to this country.

Prof. Tebbutt found that while the consumption of goods by consumers held up remarkably well during the last three years the consumption of producers' goods suffered an unprecedented slump. The way out of the depression, and Mr. Tebbutt asserts, "the only way, is by a balanced recovery." To that end, he says that it is necessary to get an increase in such goods as lumber, iron, steel, lead, copper and zinc. He goes further to say that should a balanced recovery come at this time it could not be attributed in any considerable degree to current activities of the national administration. An increase that would get business back to normal would require new investments of capital, and these will take place only as confidence is inspired among the investing public in the soundness and permanency of the recovery."

The position of THE TRIBUNE is that it is the patriotic duty to lend every assistance to the government in its present endeavor. To that end the Tribune company has accepted the code for newspapers and is doing everything required by the code. Moreover, perceiving that recovery is lagging because of the lack of an increase in the capital goods industries, we are making substantial additions to our plant equipment.

But like Prof. Tebbutt, we are not convinced that prosperity will be brought back by NRA. The conditions which are being rectified by the present national drive did not create the depression. THE TRIBUNE has pointed out steadily and forcibly during the last three years that the depression was made, continued and intensified by the discouragement that was being offered to capital to invest. The principal contributors to the depression were the governments themselves which imposed such heavy taxes upon industry that there was no incentive to undertake the risks involved in starting new enterprises or adding to the size of existing ones.

Governments had and still have an opportunity to promote business recovery, but that opportunity does not consist in interfering with the carrying on of private enterprise. If governments will slash their expenditures to the bone, the moderate taxes which would result would speedily bring about a vast increase in the investing of capital, and therewith a wholesale return to jobs by those who haven't any chance of being employed now.

The other steps necessary to bring about revival in the investment which is necessary to the recovery of the capital goods industries were mentioned in a preceding editorial. They are as follows: 1. A return to the gold standard, so that those who buy bonds may know the size of the dollar with which they are to be paid back. 2. The revival of a capital market, in the way of which the truth in securities act seems to stand.

SAFETY AND RAILWAY EQUIPMENT.

In a recent circular to railway presidents, Coordinator Eastman suggested that a thorough canvass of existing freight equipment of the railways should be made. The results, as well as the views of the operators as to repairs versus retirement of obsolete equipment, are to be submitted to the administration.

It is a little unfortunate that Mr. Eastman did not include passenger equipment in his circular. Within the week a rear end collision occurred with a shocking loss of life, the latter directly chargeable to the fact that an archaic, wooden passenger coach was included in a train of steel cars. There is much empty freight equipment stored on railway sidings that has not seen service in years. A substantial part of it is doubtless uneconomical, but from the point of view of public service passenger equipment is of more importance and should receive first consideration.

Headway has been made in recent years in the development of lighter trains, stream-lining, self-contained units and electrification. They promise economy to the railways and better service to the passengers. Money is available and the public safety is at stake. Coördinator Eastman should promptly follow his circular with appropriate orders. There is no economy in antiquated equipment.

CUBAN TURMOIL AND AMERICAN RESPONSIBILITY FOR IT.

Mr. Swanson, secretary of the navy, hovered off the troubled coast of Cuba for a moment, also troubled, and then with discretion and the advice of Ambassador Welles as his guide, was on his way without debarking although it had been part of his original intention, whatever all of his intention might have been, to visit the ambassador ashore. Numbers of angry Cubans along the water front may think they chased him. They demonstrated against him and he took wing away from the convoy of his battleships to the Panama coast.

Several official and conflicting explanations have been made regarding the naval secretary's proposed landing in Cuba. The first one was that he was to be the President's onlooker and reporter. A subsequent explanation was that his visit had no governmental import whatever. Mr. Swanson, who first inclined to the earlier understanding of his status, finally swung around to the latter. A private visitor can abandon a call more gracefully than a cabinet minister on an accredited mission.

Sterner stuff would have insisted on landing when the affair had gone so far as to reach the dock; wiser counsel would have changed the secretary's plans the moment conditions changed in Cuba to make his presence troublesome. The thoroughgoing concentration the administration is giving domestic affairs may account for a number of second thoughts in foreign relations, but second thoughts do not always avoid complications.

When Mr. Swanson found himself in hot water it was best to get out of it if nothing was in contemplation. Keeping out of hot water is a simple good in diplomacy. It requires information and foresight, but the diplomatic service is supposed to be organized to get the information. Foresight may be a gift. A diplomat is lucky to have it. So is his country when he has.

American diplomacy frequently discovers that the cigar was loaded only when it blows up. Then it is necessary to come out of the confusion with the best face possible. It is said to be the purpose of the American government to allay the conquering terror myth in its dealings with Cuba. Everywhere in the Latin-American countries there are political elements waiting to burn the fat whenever it is possible to misrepresent what the United States proposes. Second thoughts do not give Washington the best chance to avoid mistakes.

When Mr. Welles went to Cuba the island had a government. It was better than anarchy, in spite of the Machado private police of ruffians. It was a government much, say, as the Huerta government in Mexico before Mr. Wilson took the high hand there with the consequence that the army and navy were soon up to their necks in undertakings of which no one, not even Mr. Wilson, knew the purpose. As the result of Mr. Welles' ambiguous proceedings in Havana an uprising without a plan was produced against Machado. This uprising being without a plan succeeded in driving out the president and his government but had to invent something hastily to take its place and the extemporizing was not successful. A revolution without a design merely promoted another one with less design and Cuba was exposed to disorders and threats of disorders, bringing the United States to face a much worse situation than the one Mr. Welles found when he went to Cuba.

American recklessness had brought intervention much nearer than it had been before any diplomatic maneuvers were undertaken, and such diplomacy is nothing but recklessness. If the lesson of it can be learned in Washington that is about the only advantage the United States can hope to gain from the adventure into which it proceeded so carelessly. If the worst happens and if American armed forces are chasing Cubans all over the island merely because American action destroyed Cuban government the folly will be incredible.

HONESTY ALWAYS THE BEST POLICY.

A "high power" advertising salesman, recently arrived in town, has told one of the customers of THE TRIBUNE that he had cause to complain because his payments for advertising in THE TRIBUNE did not bring him special treatment in the news columns or political pressure upon officeholders whom THE TRIBUNE had supported for election. He then indicated that the attitude of his own paper in both these respects, unfavorable as well as favorable, would be measured by the patronage it received.

That solicitations of this kind are still made indicates that some people cannot learn from history. No paper has ever succeeded by such methods. Efforts to woo journalistic profits by the prostitution of news and editorial policies have always been in vain. For if virtue without ability has not necessarily brought success, no amount of brilliancy has been able to sustain an unethical publication.

Dishonorable journalism is suicidal to every publication and therefore nonproductive to advertisers. Advertising returns cannot be expected from a medium that is cutting its own throat.

Editorial of the Day

FORGETTING THE REPUBLIC.

[The New York Sun.]

One of the American delegates to the congress of the second internationale at Paris, Prof. Maynard Krueger of the University of Chicago, in a speech about conditions in the United States said that a chance has been opened for workers "to prepare for the race between Fascism and socialism that is clearly begun."

Surely no Democrat can be willing to admit that the termination of administration by the Republican party marked the end of the republic. Any Republican who should make such an assertion would be set down as carrying partisanship to extremes. How could a race between Fascism and socialism be begun before the republic itself as a political objective had disappeared from human minds?

Is not Prof. Krueger affording an example of an American who, in the ardor of his studies of European politics, has forgotten or never really learned that the United States is a republic? Surely no one who ever has grasped that fact could imagine that Americans would make no effort to retain their republic before being plunged into a struggle between two rival schools of European politics.

Professors, most of all, might be expected to become leaders in this American cause. Their study surely must have taught them that the republic is the only kind of government in the history of the world under which men from the educational profession ever have been able to rise to the most influential places.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

I WISH I WERE ADMIRAL BYRD.

Down to the South Pole he's going to sail,
Where they can't get him by phone or by mail;
Just penguins and icebergs for thousands of miles;
But no beauty queens, no chorus girl prancers,
And it's probably too cold for any fan dancers.
No income tax or sales tax to pay,
And joy, oh joy, there's no NRA.
No RFC, no Brain Trust, no comic papers,
No baseball, no tennis, no golf or football,
Just the sea and the ice and the silence, that's all.
No divorces, no movies, no bonds, and no stocks,
Nothing down there but just piles of rocks;
When I think where he's going with envy I'm stirred,
Oh gosh! How I wish I were Admiral Byrd.

HENRY FORD'S ASSOCIATES say that Henry, having complied with the NRA code, finds no need to sign it. In Mr. Ford's case, certainly not. The Creator of all things made the earth, the stars, and all that in them is. But he didn't sign 'em, did He? Certainly not. Then why should Henry?

OF COURSE, the framers of the constitution of these United States signed it. But there's a big difference between making the constitution and making one of Henry's cars.

BEHIND THE MARIGOLDS.

Deep in meditation, the sunflowers, having reached maturity, look down; the cosmos, yet to run its course of life, looks up: alien age in the presence of alien and fleeting youth. Now stately in their insistence, the chrysanthemums press in upon the flaming asters, but lately come and reluctant to be upon their way. A lone wasp leisurely explores the treasure vaults of the trumpet vine, and their doors are standing open. There is brown upon the lawn, but not the brown of the thrushes, for those gallants and their families of the lindens are far away in preparation for high adventure that lies deep down in the south, and the cry of the killdee by day and the call of the screech owl by night reveal that time is running fast. There are shadows other than those upon the sun dial and faster, too, for overhead are waves of purple grackles, mighty phalanxes of the equinox; and finches cease their lilting to hide among the willows and watch them as they pass . . .

. . . a little girl skips up the garden path, half hidden by a flaming sheaf of marigolds, and she bends and smiles as she feels the silken and fragrant bloom of the Chinese lilac brushing against a tanned and glistening cheek. She, too, is alien to Time . . . but he is just behind her; and, fumbling in the foliage of his garments for his case of seasonal calling cards, touches the milkweed pod—and a wind that bends low on the lengthening shadows hears Time's command and gives its contents distribution. . . .

THAT FELLA DOWN IN STREATOR.

QUEER how a word gets clear away from its original meaning and still we hang on to it. Take the world "hitch-hiker"; who ever saw a hitch-hiker do any hiking?

CENTURIES OF PROGRESS.

One hundred years' achievements
Are writ upon the scroll—
Ten decades' marching forward . . .
And yet methinks 'tis droll
That booby genus homo
Still flocks him super-much
In numbers past all other spots
To fan dances and such.

How to Keep Well By Dr. W. A. Evans

CONVULSIONS.

As a rule convulsions are not immediately dangerous, although they are always alarming. Furthermore, as a rule, convulsions are self-limited and call for no treatment. What is done for the relief of a sufferer during a convulsion does more harm than good. For all such cases neglect is better than excess activity.

In adults much the most frequent cause of convulsions is epilepsy. In spasms of this type the only help that does good is placing something between the teeth in order to protect the tongue against bites. A handkerchief, stick, knife, or pencil will do. Whatever is inserted there must be no violence. Teeth have been knocked out by forcing sticks into the mouth.

Lifting the head, bathing the face, ammonia to the nose, and similar minor attentions do no good, though they are generally harmless. The epileptic himself usually prefers not to have attention or cause disturbance.

Diabetics are very liable to coma but they rarely have convulsions due to the coma condition. On the other hand, too little sugar in the blood is liable to cause convulsions with which coma may be associated. Convulsions of this type call for prompt attention. The best procedure is the injection of glucose or some other sugar. When that is not feasible it may be possible to get candy, lump sugar, or some other sweet into the stomach. Since blood sugar deficiency in diabetes generally results from an overdose of insulin the important question calling for a quick answer in every case of diabetes with coma is whether or not insulin should be given, or sugar. Sometimes one knows when insulin was given and how much. That information supplies the answer. Old diabetics accustomed to taking insulin know the difference in the preliminary symptoms of the two kinds of coma and, if conscious, will tell you whether the need is for insulin or for sugar. Testing the urine may supply a quick answer. If sugar is present the indication is for insulin. If it is not, sugar is needed. Smelling the breath to detect the acidosis sweetness may tell. The presence of convulsions may supply the answer. The safe plan is to be prepared to give both sugar and insulin, and to give sugar at once. Then try to settle which it is. If the coma is diabetic the dose of insulin would be larger than if sugar had not been administered. If the collapse is due to too much insulin repeat the dose of sugar.

Another form of convulsions in adults is that due to uremia. That is diagnosed by examining the patient for dropsy and making a quick test of the urine for albumin. The remedy is chloroform anesthesia or the use of sodium amytal or sodium phenobarbital. These last procedures are not easily within the field of emergencies calling for first aid.

The spasms may be due to poisoning such as that caused by strychnine. The remedy for that is amytal or some other barbituric remedy, or chloroform.

Convulsions in children are much more frequently encountered. Although a child in convulsions causes great alarm there is not much danger of fatality. Those that are accompanied by fever are best treated by ice to the head and warm body baths. Many forms of acute disease in children cause spasms in the earlier stages of the disease. It is important that the nature of the underlying disease should be discovered as early as possible. For instance, almost every form of contagious disease except diphtheria is liable to cause convulsions in children.

A WALKING DOCTOR.

A. W. S., M. D., writes: Because of cramps in one leg I left off my garters the last time I visited A Century of Progress. I have always advised my patients of the evils of tight garters, but never had an idea that mine could cause any constriction, for I have been careful not to have them tight. To my great surprise the weary aching in my feet that I experienced after former visits to the Century of Pedestrianism did not occur, though I outdid my previous creditable records in walking. I came home much less tired than I expected. Evidently even slight constriction is too much for legs as old as mine, only 62. I trust that some of the women I have seen at the Fair in high heeled shoes will profit by their experience as I have by mine.

WHAT TO DO FOR CASTS.

Mrs. A. writes: What is a cast? The cause? What is the best thing to do for it? I means casts in the urine.

REPLY.

The casts found when one examines the urine of a person with nephritis are casts or molds of the kidney tubules. They are composed of albumin to which are stuck kidney cells, granular débris, or blood cells. They are found especially in some forms of Bright's disease.

If they are found further examinations should be made to discover what disease is present and treatment should be based on diagnosis.

MAY BE ASTHMA.

E. M. H. writes: I have a boy 4 years old and every morning when he wakes up he is choked up and coughs, and sometimes his nose is clogged. After breakfast this leaves him and he is all right for the rest of the day.

REPLY.

I wonder if he has asthma due to something in his pillow or mattress.

SPECKS BEFORE EYES.

A. J. S. writes: I have been troubled for about ten years with floating specks and webby marks in both eyes. These specks move about as the head is tossed upward or sideways. I have never been severely sick in my life and feel well otherwise.

REPLY.

You have had these specks for more than ten years, and you will have them for more than another decade. You first began to think about your interior department about ten years ago, and you then discovered these floaters. When you let your interior run itself you will lose track of them.

SALE OF PROPERTY.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Property was deeded to the children by parents. At this time there is a chance to sell the property. 1. Which party will have to pay for transfer of title, the party buying the property or the party selling? 2. Can real estate dealer accept a commission from both parties when dealer was engaged by buying party to get property for him? 3. What is administrator's fee for handling property, collecting rents, paying taxes etc.? 4. Can heirs demand an accounting from administrator without being obliged to carry same into courts? F. C. R.

1. The purchaser would pay for employing an attorney to examine the abstract for him and for recording his deed. The vender would pay for preparation of the deed.
2. Yes, if it is understood by both that he is acting for both.
3. These are not properly functions of an administrator. If he performs these services it should be on the basis of a private agreement which should contain the terms of his compensation.
4. Of course they can demand, but if it is necessary to apply force this would mean court proceedings.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

UNSAFE PLATFORM.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—[Friend of the People.]—Some four weeks ago I saw an accident on North Crawford avenue which almost took the life of an employé working on the railroad loading platform. This platform is decayed and unsafe. Please see what can be done about this condition. J. L. C.

Following the inspection of the premises referred to the owner was notified to replace all defective timbers of loading platform and put same in good and safe condition within five days.

JOHN E. ERICSSON,
Commissioner of Buildings.

PARKING LOT.

Chicago, Sept. 7.—[Friend of the People.]—Across the street is a parking lot. As I understand it, it is supposed to be over 100 feet from a public school, and yet this is less than 50 feet. It is a great nuisance in the neighborhood, but it seems everybody is afraid of or doesn't know how to go about stopping it. Is there anything that can be done to put a stop to this, or must we continually go on listening to the racket, which is against the law at that? N. V.

In regard to the open air parking lot referred to, this property is in an apartment district and such use is in violation of the zoning ordinance. Notice has been sent to owner to discontinue use of premises for business purposes.

JOHN E. ERICSSON,
Commissioner of Buildings.

NRA Question Box

Requests for information concerning the NRA will be answered in this column. It is urged that questions be stated briefly. Following are some typical questions occasioned by the national recovery act and their answers:

QUESTION—Will you please tell me whether the large downtown hotels come under the recovery act?

ANSWER—All hotels will come under the NRA. The code for this industry has been submitted by the American Hotel association and is under consideration at Washington at this time. The preliminary suggested schedule calls for a 48 hour week for female and a 54 hour week for male employés, with watchmen, night clerks, night auditors, and executives excepted.

QUESTION—What minimum wages am I to pay under the NRA to an inexperienced girl just out of high schools who wants to learn to be a dentist's assistant?

ANSWER—Professional offices such as yours are, up to the present, not specified as included under the NRA, although we know of a number of instances where doctors and dentists have patriotically placed their help on the NRA basis. So long as you do not operate under the NRA you may pay any wages or work any number of hours you wish.

QUESTION—What are the hours under the NRA for waitresses in Cicero, Ill.?

ANSWER—The hours for waitresses in Cicero, as well as in any other large center, are 48 per week. Hours for men are 54 a week.

QUESTION—Are hotels and apartment buildings exempted in any way from the NRA?

ANSWER—We expect both will eventually come under the NRA. A hotel code is now under consideration in Washington. We have been advised that a code covering apartment hotels which cater largely to transient visitors is being formulated.

SEEN AND HEARD.

Chicago, Sept. 6.—Within a week I have seen the breadth of Kate Smith spread across the expanse of the silver screen and heard her advocate universal adherence to those self-contradictory regulations known as codes. In her appeal to the emotions she had the support of other screen and stage folk pictured in the act of subscribing their names to something they hadn't read and wouldn't understand if they had—propaganda.

I saw and heard an unhandsome newspaper man, who happens to be a United States senator, laud a scheme for guaranteeing bank deposits which has failed disastrously in the eight or ten states where it has been tried because it sets a premium on ignorance in banking and irresponsibility in depositing—propaganda.

I saw a human asininity masquerading as an economist, and heard a voice portray the beauties of currency inflation as a means to prosperity—a scheme which has been tried a thousand times and always with disastrous consequences. Are we all supposed to be illiterate?

I saw and heard the attorney general of the United States and a United States senator from New York babbling about crime and the means of stopping it. I thought they must have been tutored by a Chicago schoolboy.

I saw and heard the secretary of agriculture struggling to harmonize what he purposes doing with a series of facts and making hideous discords. It was pathetic.

Wherever one turns an eye or an ear he sees or hears our great men fumbling with great problems—endeavoring to teach the lowly things that they themselves do not understand and which are probably not true. I have emerged with renewed admiration for Henry Ford, who is still so poor that he can't afford to talk.

CONTINUING THE FAIR.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—The matter of continuing the Fair indefinitely is nothing to be lightly decided upon. Because we needed and have reacted well, even beyond hopes, to its stimulus, would it be wise to become intemperate and imagine, like children wanting Christmas every day, that if a season of it was good for us an era would be still better?

Do let us be dignified and close our wonderful Exposition while it is still a delightful and beautiful inspiration, that the memory of it may be as the beginning of a true dream of better things, instead of letting it drag on and on, growing tiresome to our eyes and burdensome to our loyalty. Let its fruits be bigger and better exhibitions in the permanent buildings we are supporting and enlarging for those purposes and the continuation of our hopes for a still more beautiful and gracious city than ever before.

MURIEL BRUYERE.

DELIGHTED.

Chicago, Sept. 4.—I was indeed delighted to read your timely editorial advocating keeping our wonderful Century of Progress permanently.

It is indeed an achievement and a great credit to our city and those enterprising and loyal citizens who sponsored it and should remain as a monument to enterprise. It will be the greatest benefit not only to Chicago but the great central west, the bread basket and most fertile section of our nation.

Other metropolitan cities have their permanent annual expositions. Toronto has a great annual exposition, or fair, which has been a great success each summer for 20 years. London has its Crystal palace and gardens, always popular, and has been running for ages.

Its wonderful geographical location right in the heart of town, with the splendid water frontage on beautiful Lake Michigan, an attraction in itself, world renowned, assures the success of this wonderful enterprise and I am sure the public spirited business men and citizens will get behind this movement and great opportunity and will put it over.

SATURDAY NIGHT IN AUSTRALIA.

Racine, Wis., Sept. 5.—In the Rotogravure section of last Sunday's TRIBUNE is an illustration with the caption, "Australia on Saturday night." If the illustration that shows a couple of youngsters having their weekly bath in a small round tub in the kitchen in front of an old fashioned fireplace is intended to convey the idea that they are way behind the times in the antipodes, then I think it only fair that you should publish the fact that Australians have little to learn from us in matters of sanitation, or, for that matter, anything else outside of perhaps crime. There are two cities with a population of around one and a quarter million each—90 per cent British descent, mind you. In Melbourne is located the world's largest department store and a railway station that handles more traffic daily than any other station in the world. Across Sydney harbor has just been completed the world's longest arch bridge, and while you in Chicago every year talk of digging dirt for your subway before snow flies, Sydney has gone ahead, without any fuss, and built one. That picture is no more representative of Australia than, say, Maxwell street is of America.

HAWLEY WILSON.

NUISANCE.

Chicago, Sept. 5.—I love to hear the sound of the saw and hammer in our midst, but the loud, screeching, shrill whistle of the hoisting engine working at the new Field building, Adams and Clark streets, which sounds every few minutes during the day, will soon cause people working in the adjoining buildings to start jumping from the windows if it keeps it up. It could be toned down quite a bit and still answer its purpose.

EXILED HITLERITE SENDS AUSTRIA TERMS OF PEACE

Nazi Leader Broadcasts Demands from Munich.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MUNICH, Germany, Sept. 10.—Terms under which Austrian Nazis are willing to reach an agreement with the government of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss in Austria were broadcast from here tonight by Theodor Habicht, former Nazi leader in Austria, who was expelled because of his propaganda activities.

Asserting that Dollfuss now wishes to compromise and that the Nazis, who have been suppressed as a party in Austria, are still eager for peace, Habicht proclaimed that the Nazi terms are as follows:

1. Reëstablishment of Nazi rights and liberties in Austria as a political party in accordance with the constitution.

2. Abolishment of legal measures against Nazi leaders and members.

Want Place in Cabinet.

3. Nazi representation in a temporary cabinet to be constituted in accordance with the strength of the Nazi party.

4. A general election to be held as soon as possible.

5. Formation of a cabinet thereafter constituted in accordance with the results of the election.

Habicht added that the Nazis never have made a secret of their conviction that the treaties of St. Germain and Versailles are a tyrannous oppression of the people of Germany and Austria. The Nazis' chief aim is to unite Austria with the German reich, he said.

No Fascist State for Austria.

VIENNA, Sept. 10.—(AP)—With nationwide interest centering on Chancellor Dollfuss' address tomorrow explaining to the people the new constitution soon to be given to Austria, it was made plain today that the charter is not expected to furnish a framework for a Fascist state. This clarification was contrary to the Heimwehr program broadcast by Prince Starhemberg on his return from Rome.

Chancellor Dollfuss' declaration of policy was considered likely to have an important bearing on the future attitude toward Vice Chancellor Winkler's "national corporate front," the first big gathering of which is purposely set for Sept. 17.

Attacks Prince Starhemberg.

The Winkler meeting will be held at Graz and will be noticeably if not outspokenly Aryan in character. Meanwhile Winkler's newspaper continued to attack Prince Starhemberg for his Fascist heimwehr "dreams of power."

Max Depolo, composer of the popular "Kaiserjäger" march which is played at all Austrian patriotic gatherings, was jailed today as a Nazi.

FRENCH MINISTER POINTS TO GERMANY; WARNS, DON'T DISARM!

PARIS, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Further indication that France intends to maintain her armed strength intact in the face of "troubled atmosphere" in Europe, was given today by Edmond Miellet, minister of pensions, in a speech at Meaux commemorating the 19th anniversary of the battle of the Marne. Declaring that Germany had not renounced the "desire for imperialism," the minister suggested this was no time to disarm.

"It is necessary to redouble our precautions and assure with courage our material and moral defense," Miellet said. "Let our frontier be resistant, our energies remain intact."

The speech strengthened previous indications that France will oppose any agreement for disarmament at Geneva until assured of the success of her arms control plan, to which Germany is opposed.

The French hope to obtain American and English approval of the plan in conversations to be held in Paris Sept. 18.

A bid for American support was indicated at the Meaux ceremony when Miellet turned toward Col. Frank Lahm, United States military attaché, and suggested that "a new star be added to the American emblem, destined to mark the friendship of France for the United States."

SALE OF TAGS TODAY TO AID 47 CHARITIES

This is Have a Heart Day and taggers will be on duty all over the city exchanging the heart shaped tags for contributions which are to be apportioned among 47 charitable organizations. Mrs. Elizabeth A. Conkey commissioner of public welfare, after a series of conferences as to how the taggers and the money should be apportioned, directed that the collection take place and the distribution be discussed later.

Miss Ellen Babcock, president of the Chicago Federated Charities, which sponsors the tag day, made an appeal to citizens to be generous and give what they can. The charities to be aided are in great need of funds, she said.

There were some last minute additions to the organizations to participate in the collection and some confusion was created thereby. Mrs. Conkey and Miss Babcock urged every organization to get its taggers out and said they would then take up the matter of the allotment to each. They stressed the fact that all the money is to go to charity.

13 MEN MISSING AFTER SHIP SINKS IN OCEAN CRASH

CORUNNA, Spain, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Thirteen men were reported missing at sea today after a collision which sank the steamer Echano, a Spanish vessel.

The Spanish steamer Romeu wirelessed to the Finisterre station that she collided with and sank the Echano in a fog at 3 a. m. in longitude 40.46 north and latitude 9:12 west, off the Spanish coast. The Romeu reported the captain of the Echano and five men were rescued.

The Romeu said she was making for Oporto, escorted by the Lliandovery Castle, and was within 30 miles of port. The crew and passengers of the Romeu were reported uninjured. The vessel was leaking.

EINSTEIN HIDES IN BRITISH HUT TO ESCAPE NAZIS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Dr. Albert Einstein, who left his residence at Coq-sur-mer, Belgium, following reports that a German Nazi organization had put a price upon his head, is now secluded in a hut overlooking the North sea, somewhere on the east coast of England. He will stay at this place, known only to a few friends, until October when he will go to America to lecture.

Although no police guards were visible, the scientist's host, Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson, M. P., arranged for a party of friends to surround him during his stay in London. He arrived here last night from Belgium and left early today.

"All I want is peace and could I have found a more peaceful retreat than England?" he said. "At Le Coq I was constantly guarded. It was a terrible strain and a great responsibility for the Belgian police. I do not know whether there is a price of $5,000 on my life as reported. There is no reason the Nazi secret organization should want to kill me."

MAX SHULMAN MADE HEAD OF ZIONIST GROUP

Max Shulman was elected president of the Zionist organization of Chicago at the close of its annual conference in the Hotel La Salle yesterday. William M. Katz and A. Z. Judah Pilch read a report on the world Zionist congress and in an address urged a strengthening of workers of Zionism all over the world for the upbuilding of Palestine as a haven for Jews.

Leading Ladies of the Paris Openings

HAVE ALL THE GLAMOR OF THE PRE-WAR DAYS

You're going to dress-up this Winter! It wasn't a burst of shoulders or a black-and-white wave that greeted us when we arrived in Paris, but something much more exciting than any one theme-song. Paris has brought back a new feeling for dress. With bold contour lines, a swirl of rich fabric from the throat to the ground and a brainstorm of trimming everywhere, clothes once more breathe an air of elegance.

No longer will it be a matter of a dozen little dresses doing a 12-hour job with a few bright accessories added for good measure. You may have fewer things this year but each one will be more magnificent than anything you have worn in the last decade and perfectly appointed. Perhaps, you will choose Molyneux's velvet suit with a fur turban and tiny velvet muff for an afternoon engagement—a cocktail dress with velvet gloves matching your bunch of scarlet coq feathers—and then, as a climax, Mainbocher's dinner gown with the three enormous flowers right under your chin. Doesn't this sound like a new code for living . . . straight from Paris?

JOHNSTON MYERS OFFERS PLAN TO BANISH HUNGER

Aid to Morale of Needy, Says Immanuel Pastor.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The old adage that music hath charms to soothe the savage breast has been revised and brought down to date by the Rev. Dr. Johnston Myers, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church, 2320 South Michigan avenue.

During the last year Dr. Myers has provided free meals for 1,000,000 or more persons at old Immanuel. But just as important as is the food for the hungry is the fact that at Immanuel the hungry not only eat, but sing. It is out of this music-food combination that Dr. Myers' modernized adage sprang.

"We cannot be without hope for better times and we can never become hateful or despondent if we can sing," said Dr. Myers, who is appealing for aid to keep his singing breadline moving during the coming winter. But he is not merely asking for money. He also asks that railroads, commission merchants, food manufacturers, and farmers refrain from destroying foodstuffs which might otherwise be distributed at Immanuel or from other centers throughout the city.

Needs Funds to Transport Food.

Dr. Myers explained that his principal need for funds is to move foodstuffs to Chicago. He told of his experience during the last two years, during which he has obtained 60,000 bushels of peaches and pears from Michigan. The fruit was brought to the city on trucks donated by industrial concerns. This fruit, together with trainloads of potatoes, cabbages, and apples, Dr. Myers distributed among Catholic, Protestant, and Episcopal agencies, as well as through the three Immanuel centers.

From this experience of two years in gathering surplus foods Dr. Myers says he has developed a plan not only to banish hunger from Chicago during the coming winter, but also to economize public relief expenditures and to preserve the morale of the needy as well. This plan, founded on the veteran pastor's 43 years of experience in social work and charitable enterprise, bespeaks its consideration by charity leaders.

Dr. Myers stated that a fund of $200,000, principally to pay the freight on excess foods, together with alert attention both to the sources of excess supply and to those products without sufficient profit to warrant harvesting, in various parts of the country, would be adequate to banish hunger from Chicago for the next twelve months.

Harvest Small Potatoes.

As an example, Dr. Myers pointed to the potato crop near Waupaca. There, he said, the potatoes are small this year and will be left in the ground, unharvested, because of this. These potatoes can be had for the digging. Why not, asked Dr. Myers, send out some of our unemployed and some trucks and harvest those potatoes?

As a means of eliminating petty grafting on public charity as well as a plan to stimulate and encourage the jobless to keep on hunting work Dr. Myers proposes that each family secure food for only one day at a time. He explained that this would require the setting up of many convenient stations throughout the city.

"These day by day trips for food, we have found by experience at Immanuel, has kept needy people alert," Dr. Myers explained. "The worst feature of the depression is the decay of morale among those without jobs and who depend upon civic charity. The sense of responsibility tends to disappear. What we ned to do, in addition to feeding the hungry, is to enliven their sense of responsibility. We have accomplished this to a very large extent at Immanuel."

No Aid to Patriotism.

"Public charity," he said, "has not been breeding patriotism, but something opposite to patriotism. Every one hears much grumbling among those who receive public aid. No one loves Illinois more because he has been receiving his weekly or monthly ration as a result of the expenditure of public funds. The tendency is for those thus aided to love the state less for its beneficence. Here at Immanuel, and at David Gibson's Cathedral Shelter and at Father Cummins' Catholic charities, the story is different.

"The reason for this is not hard to understand. Our Master said, 'Man cannot live by bread alone' and by the very nature of the case, state aid for the needy must be a 'bread alone' matter. There must be something more than gifts for the poor if the poor are to keep from hating the giver. Our answer is 'bread plus,' and that plus element is an intangible thing—a friendliness that accompanies the gift. There is as great a need for that as for bread."

Sincerity of Singing.

As Dr. Meyers made that statement a chorus of many voices was heard in another part of Immanuel church. The old hymn, "All Hail, Immanuel," was being sung in clear vibrant tones.

The reporter was held by the sincerity of the singing. Seldom had he heard its equal in spiritual power, except, perhaps in the old Cathedral shelter on West Washington street where children form the great chorus. At the close of the hymn, Dr. Myers explained.

"This is our regular afternoon for choir practice. One hundred of the women who come here each day for their food for the day remain to sing. They look forward all week to this period as the one bright spot in the lives of many of them. At home, there is the kitchen sink, of which they see too much; and washtubs, together with discouragement, uncertainty, and want; four dingy walls, no electric lights, and gas cut off. Would you like to go out and hear these women sing?"

DE VALERA CHARGES FOES ARE TRYING TO PRODUCE CIVIL WAR

DUNDALK, Irish Free State, Sept. 10.—(AP)—President Eamon de Valera took opportunity today to reply to the manifesto of the new United Ireland party.

"If we win the economic war there is no reason why this country should not maintain an increasing population in comfort," he said. "If we lose the people will be faced with misery."

Addressing a large open air gathering, he declared the aim and purpose of the "so-called merger" was to insure weakening the elected government and reducing the Irish people to surrender.

"The gentlemen who made the civil war in 1922 were foiled in their attempts to produce another," said De Valera. "Now they are trying a new game. Cosgrave and O'Duffy are uniting as they have been united all along, and they have induced MacDermott to join them."

POLICE RETURN BABY KIDNAPED BY AUTO THIEVES

Doris Jean Juhnke, 7 months old, was returned safe to her parents early yesterday after having been kidnaped unwittingly by automobile thieves, who drove off with the car in which she was sleeping.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Juhnke, 1436 West Erie street, called on relatives Saturday evening at 3638 North Monticello avenue. The baby was asleep in her hammock-cradle in the car when the parents arrived at the Monticello address, so they did not disturb her. When they started home early yesterday they found that the car was missing.

Police squads throughout the northwest side were notified. Five hours later Policeman Walter Fergus of the Albany Park station heard cries from an automobile parked near Troy street and Montrose avenue, and found the child, unharmed. Apparently the thieves had abandoned the car when they discovered her presence.

GOVERNOR TAKES RELIEF PROBLEM TO WASHINGTON

Delegation to Tell U. S. of Fund Crisis.

Gov. Horner and Mayor Kelly headed a delegation that departed yesterday for Washington to seek government aid in the idle relief crisis now confronting the county and state because of lack of funds.

In the group were Lieut. Gov. Thomas F. Donovan, State Senators J. J. Barbour, Richard J. Barr, and Harold G. Ward, Speaker Arthur Roe, and State Representatives David Shanahan, Elmer J. Schnackenberg, Frank A. McCarthy, and Michael Bray; State Auditor Edward J. Barrett, and Emmett Whealan, president of the county board.

State Needs $20,000,000.

They will meet United States Senators James Hamilton Lewis and William H. Dieterich and members of the Illinois congressional delegation in Washington, and they will lay their troubles before Relief Administrator Hopkins. Gov. Horner said they will inform Mr. Hopkins that the state needs $20,000,000 to furnish food, heat, and shelter to families on relief rolls.

Cook county relief stations were to close today for lack of funds, but it was decided to anticipate the collection of the gasoline tax which is expected to supply sufficient money to last throughout the week. After that, the officials said, it is up to the government.

Will Not Discuss Security.

Gov. Horner said that he did not want to say what offers Illinois would make as to security for a loan. He said he did not wish to commit the legislature to any plan, as that body might have different ideas than he has. The delegation would be guided by whatever demands the government makes, he said.

A special session of the legislature will be called to consider any suggestions made in Washington, or to take whatever other action is necessary, Gov. Horner said. If the government demands bonds as security for a loan the legislature will be asked to authorize their issuance.

The Emergency Relief commission announced as the delegation was leaving, that at present it is able to furnish only the barest necessities to families on its rolls. Relief commitments for the month of June averaged $19.70 per family, or less than 66 cents a day. Less than 50 per cent of the idle have at any time been on the rolls, the commission declared, and the August case count of the Cook county bureau of public welfare is nearly 33 per cent lower than the March figure.

The index of employment of the Illinois department of labor for the month of July was 36.7 below the average for the period 1925-1927, the commission declared, and the problem of caring for the idle is still a gigantic one.

Plan Parties for Opening of Orchestra

First Concert Announced for Oct. 5.

BY JUDITH CASS.

WITH announcements of the opening of the forty-third season of the Chicago Symphony orchestra in the mail, several hundred socially prominent Chicagoans are drawing up dinner lists and thinking of new gowns for the evening of Oct. 5. Always the first night of the symphony is an important event, but this year it is doubly so, since the possibility of a limited season or no season at all had to be surmounted.

The date of opening is a week earlier than usual, for the orchestra trustees want to give our thousands of music loving A Century of Progress visitors an opportunity to hear symphonic music by a group of master musicians under the baton of one of the world's foremost conductors. The beloved Frederick Stock will be entering on his twenty-ninth year, while a good many of his listeners will be entering on even more than their twenty-ninth season in their same places.

Charles Hamill, the president of the orchestra association has taken his same box again. And so have Mrs. Arthur Barnhart, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Swift, the Albert Spragues, Mr. and Mrs. Chalkley Jay Hambleton, the Charles H. Morses, Harold F. McCormick, and the Chauncey McCormicks.

Then there will also be in the box horseshoe on Thursday evenings the Cyrus H. Adamses, the Bruce Borlands, the Arthur G. Cables, Mrs. Clyde M. Carr, the Charles B. Goodspeeds, Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, the Frank G. Logans, Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Welling, and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore W. Robinson, all of them trustees and members of the orchestral association.

The Thursday-Friday concerts—as usual, of course, the Thursday evening concert will be repeated on Friday afternoon—present a brilliant array of artists this year. Among them are Mischa Elman, Nathan Milstein, Mischa Mischakoff, Dalles Frantz, Rudolph Ganz, and Vladimir Horowitz.

Sir Hamilton Harty, the famous British conductor, who was in Chicago not so many weeks ago, will return in January in the capacity of guest conductor.

Patty Calkins Makes Debut.

Debutantes and their beaux toured the north shore last night on a treasure hunt, with the George B. Calkins' house on Hubbard lane in Winnetka as their final goal. The hunt was the climax of the debut festivities for the Calkins' blonde daughter, Miss Patty Calkins.

From 4 to 7 o'clock Miss Calkins, stunning in a buttercup crêpe dress decorated by a bouquet of white cosmos, received with her parents in the drawing room of their home. Mrs. Calkins' dress was a delicately patterned navy blue print.

After the tea there was a buffet supper for all of the assistants and their beaux. Then the party started on the treasure hunt. Miss Calkins' assistants included Miss Barbara Ann Bastien, Miss Dorothy Ott, Miss Allene Withers, Miss Eleanor Janney, Miss Jean Lamson, Miss Nancy Harris, Miss Harriet Fentress, Miss Marie Louise Gardner, Miss Barbara Hobart, Miss Sarah Key of New York, Miss Elsie Ferguson of Newport News, and Miss Patricia Oishei of Buffalo. The end of this month Miss Calkins will resume her studies at Sarah Lawrence college.

Nancy Harris to Be Debutante.

The junior Alan M. Harrises, who returned last week from their summer home in Vermont, have decided to present their oldest daughter, Miss Nancy Harris, to society at a tea Christmas afternoon. Miss Harris is returning the 20th for her second year at Sarah Lawrence college. Meantime she is participating in all the debutante parties.

Mrs. Edwin A. Seipp and her debutante daughter, Miss Pauline Seipp, are to be hostesses at a luncheon that Mrs. Seipp is giving for her daughter at 1 o'clock Thursday at the Barrington Hills Country club. The debutantes of this season and several postdebs will be driving Barringtonwards from Chicago and the north shore on that day, and very likely they will have their bathing suits with them in their cars, for they are invited to the Seipps' house for a swim in the pool after the luncheon.

One hundred and sixty invitations went into the mail the last week-end for a supper dance the evening of Sept. 22, with Miss Jean McVoy and Miss Grace Fitzmorris as the hostesses. The place is the new After the Show club on North Halsted street, which is to have its formal opening next Saturday evening. The club is one of the most interesting rendezvous, with one of the most stunning interiors to be found in Chicago. The decoration is principally Mayan wood carvings done by a well known Mexican artist.

Bushes Will Visit in China.

The fall and the first half of the winter will be full of thrills and variations for Mrs. William H. Bush and her two daughters, the Misses Caroline and Emeline Bush, for they are leaving Chicago in two weeks for Vancouver to sail on the Empress of Asia for China.

On their way across the Pacific they will stop off first at Japan and then continue on to China, where they will visit friends. Their plans are very indefinite, but at the present time they intend to return home around Jan. 1.

Henry A. Knott Jr. and his brother, Alexander Knott, are enjoying their favorite summer vacation at the Land o' Lakes in Wisconsin, where they spend long days exploring many of the smaller and more hidden lakes and long nights buried deep in the feathers.

Good Morning!

Again the screen sucks sustenance from the world war.

And now we are precipitated into a German prison camp—the locale of "Captured."

Meet, then, Capt. Allison. His exploits have won him the Victorian Cross and brought him to this concentration depot. A bridegroom of only six days; torn from his beautiful Monica by the exigencies of the conflict, this distinguished prisoner eats his heart out wondering how all goes with the lovely English girl he left behind him.

Comes Digby, a friend of other days. Digby is changed and taciturn. You learn the reason long before Allison does. Mrs. Allison has not been faithful and Digby is the "other man." At last, through strange and terrible channels, the truth comes out . . .

The affair of Allison and Digby is only one stripe in the dun colored weave concerned with the sufferings, cruelty, rebellion and varied side issues of life in a prison camp . . . Never having been in such a place I can't say how true rings the tale. Some of the incidents struck me as mighty likely. Others as being strictly imagination's children. After rather a slow first reel, "Captured" becomes melodrama, effective and thunderous—but not always convincing.

Just for example, you will wonder how so many men happen to be expert air pilots, in the sequences where the prisoners rush the guards, commandeer enemy planes, and effect a wholesale escape.

Mr. Howard's performance is eminently sympathetic and workmanlike. Mr. Fairbanks draws your scowls, as his rival, and as for Miss Margaret Lindsay, you will wish to smack her down. Paul Lukas does a great bit as a soldierly but fair and human German commandant. William Le Maire introduces some welcome comedy as one Martin from Texas. Robert Barrat gives one of his berserker impersonations as an officer who is all that Mr. Lukas' Ehrlich is not. All minor rôles are ably handled. Detail and photography are effective in the main.

"Captured" is far from being a gloom disperser, but I reckon we should have pictures like it every so often to keep reminding us that war is hell.

See you tomorrow!

Tempt Beauty Parlor Patrons with Lingerie

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Some one woke up one day with a bright idea for luring cash out of unwary or overtempted females . . . you wander into a certain beauty shop to be manicured, or facialed, or reduced, and you spend your waiting moments fighting off an overwhelming desire to buy the best looking lingerie and negligees and any other airy trifles ever hung before your appreciative eyes.

For instance . . . you can buy either glamorous French originals or the breath taking lovely things made right in this country. It takes an expert to decide which is which. You will see a lovely dark green velvet hostess gown with a train and a pair of the most picturesque sleeves you ever slipped your arms into . . . the long clinging gown is open down the front to show a ruffled pale pink chiffon under slip, the ruffles cascade perpendicularly, and this pink chiffon is lovely.

Or you might like the snowy velvet hostess gown made with long sleeves gathered in at the wrist in rows of smocking . . . or cobwebby lingerie in luscious shades of flesh and blue, each put together with thousands of tiny stitches and trimmed with fragilly feminine laces.

While you are being rolled down to a mere shadow of your former self, you will longingly contemplate supersmooth satin underlayers, the all-togethers that confine without destroying the suppleness of your figure.

Or you might go on a regular buying binge and stock up on chiffon handkerchiefs, direct from Paris, like a pink square, dripping with filmy black lace, or satin tailored robes, or lavishly lace trimmed French panties, or a mirrored compact, made of a thousand tiny bits of mirror in a modernistic mosaic design.

You will find the grand travel cases, a super de luxe affair in warm brown leather, fitted with shell toilet articles and almost a year's supply of beauty preparations.

Regular Habits in Grooming Contribute Much to Beauty

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

In a recent portrayal of a numoer of glamorous women I was impressed with the businesslike care with which smart ladies pursue their cosmetic rituals.

These women before the public eye understand fully the need of always appearing beautifully groomed, and there's little of the common slapdash about their daily preparation.

Another influence in this connection is that grooming takes so prominent a place in the annals of today's beauty. In fact, one might say it is a good hundred per cent. Clothes are due a fulsome percentage, it's true, but they aren't half so vital as the grooming details. You can have the most lovely clothes in the world, but with ungroomed hair and neglected face what good are they?

And mind you, these are all busy women I'm talking about. In fact, it's frequently remarked among salon operators that it is the busy woman who is most regular in her appointments.

One woman noted for her tremendous chic and grooming spends more than an hour a day on keeping up her appearance. Just as regularly as clockwork every important detail of hair, skin, hands, massage, and so on, is tended. And this woman is probably one of the busiest I know. Not busy in a scatterbrained way, like some of the rest of us, but active in a dozen different interests.

Home women, unless they are of the really hard working variety, certainly have a half hour during a day to give over to revamping themselves, if need be, or to preservative work.

Front Views and Profiles

By June Provines

CHICAGO must move hurriedly indeed for some of its visitors. A tired woman approached John Onufrock at the Chicago Motor club about 5 o'clock in the afternoon and asked him to recommend a movie. He hesitated, then suggested it would be better if she and her companion consulted a newspaper.

Speed—First—Appearance.

* *

THE first time Katharine Cornell set foot on any stage was at an earlier age than you might have supposed. Five, she was; a plain little girl, all mouth and eyes, and her looks not enhanced by the fact that she was screaming with fright as her father led her across the boards. Also occupying the stage—and the "also" becomes slightly humorous perhaps when we go on to say that there were six elephants blandly inspecting the audience and the small reluctant girl offering them peanuts.

* *

NOW, with Margalo Gillmore as guide, for it is Miss Cornell's close friend who from the depths of a yellow bergere tells the tale, we go back to a time some four weeks before the arrival of the vaudeville show that included the elephant act. The little Katharine, whose father owned the theater, had been raised to an ecstasy of delight by a promise made her, as reward for being a good girl, that she might feed peanuts to the elephants. It must be pointed out here that Papa Cornell was a disciplinarian, comparable in some ways to Papa Barrett in Miss Cornell's recent production, so a few days afterward, when she was guilty of some childish offense, she was told she would not be permitted to feed the elephants. A week later, after extra meticulous behavior, the elephants were given back to her again, only to be taken away again two days later. This, it seems, went on up until the very day of the opening of the show, so when the child finally found herself sitting in the theater box, clutching tightly a bag of peanuts, she was in a high state of nervous tension.

* *

LITTLE KATHARINE, during her anticipation of the joy of feeding elephants, had not conjured up in her mind what an elephant really was like, so when they swayed out of the wings, single file, the stage shaking under their weight, each great creature holding to the tail of the one before him, she began to cry with fright.

"Now we will go feed the elephants as I promised you," said Papa Cornell, ignoring his daughter's perturbation.

She began to scream with fright.

"I don't want to feed the elephants. I want to go home," she pleaded between sobs.

"You are going to feed the elephants," repeated her father firmly.

And so, stumbling and weeping, and tense with fear, the child who was to become one of the first ladies of the theater stumbled on to the stage for the first time, to feed the elephants.

Rain Makes Threat, Then Spares Horse Show at Dunham Woods

BY INDIA MOFFETT.

IT looked for a while yesterday afternoon as if the rain that the country needs so badly would materialize and spoil the second annual Dunham Woods horse show at Wayne, but, fortunately for the show, it developed into nothing more serious than a gentle little shower which was over by the time the third class started. It would have been almost a tragedy if there had been enough rain to spoil the show, for there were hundreds of people there to see it, and many of them had driven from such distant places as Barrington, Lake Forest, and the city.

It was a good show, too, with some excellent horsemanship displayed and some beautiful horses. It wasn't a children's show, but youngsters under sixteen carried away the ribbons in many classes that weren't strictly for them. Miss Libby Chase had driven some of her riding pupils over from Lake Forest in a station wagon, and she must have been very proud of the number of blue, red, and yellow ribbons they carried home with them.

The station wagon proved to be a splendid vantage place from which to see the events while not riding. In Miss Chase's party were Kay Goodman, Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor, Betty Meade, whose mother, Mrs. Edward H. Bennett, was one of the judges; Ted Bennett, Edward White, Ole Eckstrom, Johnny King, Pat and Shirley Hopkins, Homer Lindsay, Eddie and Larry Dawson, and John E. Hughes and his four sons, Milton, Mansfield, Marshall, and John. Adelaide carried away the yellow ribbon in the class for bridle path horses and the blue one in the first division of the children's horsemanship class. Kay was second in the latter class, second with Ed White in the jumping in pairs at three feet, and third in jumping three and one-half feet. Ed was awarded the blue ribbon in the jumping at two feet by children under 16. Johnny King carried away the blue ribbon in the jumping at three and one-half feet in which men as well as boys and girls participated. Miss Cynthia Long was second in this class.

Other Pupils Win Prizes.

Ed was not the only one of Miss Chase's pupils to win in the children's jumping, for Homer Lindsay was second and Ole Eckstrom third. Homer also won a yellow ribbon in the second division of the children's horsemanship class. The Hughes quintet, all dressed alike, won the red ribbon in the most picturesque class of all, members of one family in line. Mrs. Henry T. Stanton of Wayne, and her three sons, Henry Jr., Jimmy, and Collier, were first in this class, and Mr. and Mrs. Joy Morton II. and their elder daughter, Betty, were third.

Certainly the most popular riders in the ring with the audience were Peggy Jones, 4 years old, and her sister Patricia, 7 years old, who were the most correct little horsewomen imaginable in impeccably fitting jodhpurs, natty hats, gloves, crops, and even boutonieres. They were third and fourth, Patty third and Peggy fourth, in the class for saddle ponies under 12 hands, and the judges, Mrs. Bennett, Valentine Crane, and Wayne Dinsmore, awarded them special ribbons in the children's horsemanship class. Their mother, Mrs. Frances Orth Jones of Wheaton, on Flapper Dare, won the blue ribbon in the three gaited saddle horse class for ladies and the red ribbon in the three gaited saddle horse class for ladies and men.

With her brother, Robert Orth, she won the red ribbon in the class for pairs of three gaited saddle horses and Mr. Orth was first on Helen Hayes in the five gaited saddle horse class.

Child Injured as Pony Bucks.

The only accident that marred the afternoon was little Mary McDougal's fall when her pony bucked and she was thrown and her face was cut, necessitating several stitches being taken. Her cousin, William McDougal, was winner of the blue ribbon in the pony class and Bobby Stader of Geneva won the red ribbon in this class.

Among other winners were Miss

BLOOD MONEY

By IRVIN S. COBB.

SYNOPSIS.

Uncas Cresap and his Chinese servant are found dead in the upper room of Cresap's boathouse on Kettle pond, near the eastern end of Long Island. Gilbert Jonathan Redd, Cresap's stepbrother, keeps a written private account of developments in the case. A blow on the forehead from a slender, sharp edged implement killed Cresap. The cause of the Chinaman's death is not apparent. Capt. Bray, a special investigator, is an old friend of Redd's. Redd is a former police reporter. Florence Dane, Cresap's niece and an orphan, lived with him. Redd was fond of Florence's mother. He bought a home near Cresap's in order to protect Florence. Cresap made his fortune in the far east. Redd freely admits to Bray his hatred of Cresap, who was a drunkard and a debauchee. There seemed to be some secret bond between Cresap and his servants, the Chinaman and a dwarf, Sabino. Bray finds a new will, disinheriting Florence. As it is unsigned the old will stands. Cresap disapproved of Florence's moneyless sweetheart, Gregory Thorpe. Thorpe disappears. He is found in a hospital, victim of a hitch-hiker, before Cresap's death, which exonerates him.

INSTALLMENT XXXI.

MATRIMONY DECLINED.

I stood there in the rain until the car was out of sight and then I climbed in my own car and rode home to bring this record up to date.

And now it's dinner time—or will be as soon as I've called up that hospital on the outskirts of Flushing. I told Florence I'd be calling her up between seventy-thirty and eight.

Still Friday, but later.

Getting Florence on the telephone tonight I had the delay one usually has when trying to establish communication with any transient in any hospital anywhere. Eventually, though, I succeeded.

"O Uncle Gil," she told me joyously; "O Uncle Gil, he's splendid! He's wearing a great turban of cotton batting, but it's really quite becoming. And he has had a shave—so his cheek is as smooth as can be! And they put a screen around his bed and let me sit with him for more than an hour. And when I told him what all had happened at Bridgeton, even then his temperature didn't go up. And I'm to have a room for tonight and tomorrow right here in the hospital—his nurse fixed that. Her name is Miss Carmody and she's a dear.

"So everything is grand except just one thing: Uncle Gil, would you believe it?—I've just proposed matrimony to a young man—and I've been declined. I feel like a spurned damsel or at least I would feel like one if girls nowadays hadn't got out of the habit of feeling like damsels. What I said to him was this: I said we'd both gone through so much lately that I thought it was high time we got married so that hereafter we could face what came together instead of having to face it separately. So why not let us wait; say, until tomorrow or possibly until day after tomorrow, but not a minute longer than day after tomorrow, and then just send out for a preacher and have the ceremony performed right here in this hospital, with Miss Carmody as the attendant and you here to give the bride away. I told him my Uncle Gil would approve and it didn't matter about anybody else."

"If he were a little weaker than he is, I'd abduct him and marry him against his will."

"Your Uncle Gil does approve," I affirmed. "It sounds to me like a sound notion. Then what's wrong with that besotted young ass that he doesn't jump at his chance?"

"That's practically what I've already called him—in slightly different words. I've argued with him and argued with him. But he's so stupid about it—so stupid and so stubborn. I could shake him! He says that even when I didn't have a cent of my own but was dependent upon some one else for the clothes I wore and the food I ate, he had his mind made up, even though we talked about eloping, that he'd never, never marry me until he was able to support me properly. And now that potentially I am wealthy in my own name, the situation becomes still more difficult—so he says. He says that if I'll wait until he is established in his profession, why then we'll go ahead and be married. And he says if I won't wait, that it's going to break his heart and wreck his life, but that all the same he values his self-respect more than he does his happiness. And the way he sets his jaws when he says that makes me know he means it! O I could slap those jaws and I would if only he were able to defend himself. And if he were a little weaker than he is, I'd abduct him and marry him against his will. But what are you going to do, Uncle Gil, when your victim is just in between?"

"I'll tell you," I counseled; "suppose you wait a little while until he gets his strength back—yes, and his sanity back, since he must be mad to refuse you under any conditions. Understand, I may admire his principles even while I deplore his lack of judgment. And wait until I have an opportunity to discuss the situation with him. Possibly I can make him see it in a different light."

"You can if anybody can," she said praisingly. "All these last six years you've been my sword and my shield, Uncle Gil, and I'm still leaning on you."

The half tragic, half humorous caroling lilt ebbed out of her voice and concern came into it.

"I'm a selfish little pig! So absorbed in my own affairs I was forgetting everything else. Uncle Gil, down there at Bridgeton, is—is everything all right?"

"Absolutely."

"You're positive? You're not trying to save me from worrying?"

"On my sacred word, child, everything is as right as rain—and if you'll press your ear closer to that telephone you can hear it rain! Now you trot along back to see Gregory and I'll call you again in the morning. Or you call me."

"Good-night, then, and here's all my love and all my gratitude and a big fat kiss."

That Gregory Thorpe is one grand kid. I was certain of it before. Now I'm doubly certain.

The fire is dead ashes in the grate and twenty minutes ago my hall clock struck for midnight, and though the rain is slackening off, I somehow don't believe Master Sabino will call again tonight, and so, as Pepys used to say, and so to bed.

Saturday, Oct. 22, noon.

The newspapers evidently have decided that this story is losing its front page importance and are calling off their squadrons. Only some light cruisers for the press associations are still here. On his way to the train Bob Skipp ran by to tell me good-by.

Also we have lost Assistant District Attorney Motley. I got that from Abe Dorset. He tells me on the eve of returning to Riverhead Mr. Motley had been heard to say, speaking with considerable rancor, that what the dictatorial Bray wanted here was not a trained legal mind but some hireling willing to run errands for him.

I ordered Abe to set some planed planks and make a tight, stout coffin for Peggy Mavourneen the Second, with a lid to be screwed on and a lining of new white sailcloth for it, because I mean to lay the old lady away in a style befitting her station and her distinguished lineage. Tonight or tomorrow, or Monday, which will be the day after tomorrow, but probably on Monday, because the melancholy task is one I'm loath to tackle, I shall put her out of her infirmities, using some swift and painless method—probably a whiff of an anesthetic first and then a pistol shot in the ear. I have made a note reminding me to wire Shumway, the superintendent of the pet animals' cemetery up near Westbury, and instruct him to dig a grave in my lot against the arrival of Abe and me with Peggy's mortal remains—whenever that may be.

Bray likewise played truant this morning. According to Skipp, he drove off betimes in a car without telling any one where he was going or how long he expected to be gone. But since he drove down the Sunrise trail, I figured it out that he was bound for the government reservation at Montauk Light, since any off coast communication for him which was handled through government channels almost certainly would be brought ashore there.

Miss Swanson Pleads Poverty; Loses Bracelet

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 10.—The next time Gloria Swanson goes to court she won't wear a diamond bracelet; at least she won't wear the $2,000 diamond and platinum wrist band she took with her to her hearing before Superior Court Commissioner Kurtz Kauffman one afternoon last week.

The theme at her hearing was her financial ability to pay a previously rendered judgment of $36,000 to Maurice Cleary, her former business agent in Hollywood, who charged that she owed him the money as his agreed fee for negotiating a film contract for the actress.

Miss Swanson told the court commissioner she had pledged everything she owned, against other debts. "What's that on your wrist?" Attorney Stephen Monteleone asked, pointing to the diamond band. She explained that it was "wearing apparel," being a gift from her young husband, Michael Farmer. Cleary's counsel demanded the bracelet toward the $36,000 judgment, and Commissioner Kauffman, after taking the matter into consideration over several days, returned a decision that she must hand over the diamond band.

Nine of the original New York stage cast are being imported en masse to help screen "Counsellor-At-Law" according to announcement at Universal. They are Vincent Sherman, Conway Washburn, John Qualin, Elmer Brown, Malka Kornstein, Angela Jacobs, Clara Langster, T. H. Manning and Marvin Kline. Leading characters from the movies who also will play in it are John Barrymore, Doris Kenyon, Bebe Daniels, Isobel Jewel, Thelma Todd, and Onslow Stevens.

John Bright, a young man not many years from high school, Chicago, who became a successful scenarist, is collaborating with Sam Orintz on the script of "Escape to Paradise" in which Richard Dix, as a heroic seaman and Helen Mack, little girl who gets shipwrecked off a whaler, are featured.

Seen at the Fox Studio: Frank Lloyd directing Clara Bow, Herbert Mundin and Richard Cromwell, from a wheel chair, his right leg propped up, for a scene in "Hoopla."

Everybody getting a laugh when Lloyd's chair pusher moved him over the bumpy ground in the final sequece.

A couple of playful Turkish musicians supplied an accompaniment for the invalid director's progress, with flute and drum. Lloyd broke his leg last month.

Paramount has bought a story titled "Rumba," with Cuban background, and George Raft is to be its central figure, a politico-military man, but the studio isn't hurrying it any too fast, figuring that present changes in the Pearl of the Antilles, may suggest some shifts in the script.

MINUTE MYSTERY

By H. A. RIPLEY

[Copyright: 1933: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

THE MURDER OF WETHERINGHAM.

Prof. Fordney, staying at The Dog and Whistle in the small village of Peranporth, Cornwall, England, was working with Detective Inspector McIntyre of Scotland Yard, a gaunt, shrewd, and somewhat taciturn Scotsman.

Several days before Brooks Wetheringham had been murdered at the manor house of Lord Percival Tabor, two miles away, where he was a guest over the week-end.

The day of the murder Fordney and McIntyre had questioned his lordship, three other guests, and the servants, without success. Going through the dead man's effects the professor found several letters addressed to Wetheringham in London, two of which contained veiled threats that, did he not live up to his agreement, dire measures would be taken to force him. The letters bore no signature.

Sitting in the small but neat and comfortable inn discussing the matter, Fordney said to McIntyre: "After careful consideration I believe Tabor is involved and I want a specimen of his handwriting to compare with those two threatening letters. And, if it is the same, well . . ."

He wrote a note, called a porter, and instructed him to deliver the sealed letter personally to his lordship and to bring back his reply.

"Well?" inquired Fordney when the porter returned.

His lordship said he would be delighted to meet you at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon."

"Are you going to meet him?" the inspector asked.

"Yes. Especially in view of the fact of his putting that over on me."

WHAT DID FORDNEY MEAN?

"All-In-One-Dish Meals," a booklet of 20 recipes for casserole dinners, is on sale at the Public Service Office, 1 South Dearborn, for 3 cents. By mail, 5 cents, stamps or coin; address mail requests to Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

BY MARY MEADE.

The provident housewife who proudly used to display hundreds of full jars of this and that all regimented together at the close of the canning season is today doing things by a much more modern system. Some foods, she has discovered, are better and more cheaply bought ready canned. Others she will still put up, but no longer in quantities to feed a young army, with promise of many being left to await sadly the second season.

Tomatoes, if we're on their list of admirers, are ones we still can with all the enthusiasm of old. What's more, it's a job that's fun, once we get it down to a formula and become wise to all the short cuts and tricks of the trade.

So here are some of the things to remember. In canning tomatoes choose fruit fully ripe, yet still firm. They may either be canned whole or cut in quarters for canning. Occasionally we find a batch of tomatoes with hard black centers inside them. This can and should be cut out if we are quartering the tomatoes. But when they are to go in the cans whole it's difficult to catch the blemish. The safest method is to cut open several tomatoes out of each batch to see that the black sections aren't generally present.

As the first step after washing, drop the fruit into scalding water and let bob in it just until the skins crack and loosen. Turn the top sides, [usually the least ripe] of the tomatoes down in the water while blanching. Dip the tomatoes in cold water and slip off the skins. If they are to be cut for canning, remove the hard cores. From this point on methods vary. But since tomatoes are acid and keep easily, either open kettle or cold pack method of canning proves excellent.

If you plan to cook them in a hot water bath or a pressure cooker and are using cut tomatoes, pack them into sterile hot jars. Add 1 teaspoon of salt to each quart, but no water. Partly seal the cans [screw the lid till it resists, then unscrew one-half turn]. Now process 30 minutes in a hot water bath or 15 minutes in a steam pressure cooker at 5 pounds. Remove and completely seal immediately.

If you are using cut tomatoes and the open kettle method, prepare your tomatoes as before, cut up, salt to taste, and boil in a large kettle for 20 minutes, skimming when necessary. With a sterile dipper transfer to hot, sterile jars and seal completely. Be sure no seeds are left on the rubber or on the screwing surface of the jar. These, when left, have a way of breaking the perfect seal and often letting in organisms which spoil the food.

But perhaps you have a weakness for whole tomatoes to give next winter's dishes a more dressed up look. To can these, blanch and peel, but do not core. Pack closely, but without crushing, into sterile, hot jars. To each quart add 1 teaspoon of salt and fill up with strained tomato juice. Partially seal as directed above and process in a hot water bath for 30 minutes, or for 15 minutes in a pressure cooker at 5 pounds pressure. Remove and seal at once.

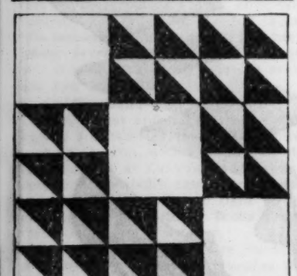
Maine Quilt Uses Triangle Figures in Winged Design



Winged Square.

BY NANCY CABOT.

During the very early days of quilt making, at the time when the colonies were being settled, geometrical figures such as squares and triangles were the principal medium of expression in quilt blocks. The "Winged Square" is an example of this trend and quilts of this design are treasured pieces of many heirlooms. Maine is the native state. Blue and white was the original color scheme.

For a quilt pattern of this design, send 5 cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, One South Dearborn.

Shirtwaist Top, Box Jacket, Now Made for Smaller Girls

GIRL'S DRESS AND JACKET.

This cute dress has a shirtwaist top, and the smart little skirt has a paneled front, with circular fulness at the sides to give ample freedom of movement. The jacket is the boxy type, just the kind older sister is wearing. Tartan plaided woolen will be smart for its development.

The pattern, No. 2880, comes in sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10 years.

The Theater guild and the American Theater society are seeking subscriptions to a program of six plays that will be presented in the Erlanger theater this season. One-half of the schedule will be provided by the guild and the other half by the society, and subscribers may make reservations for one or the other or the full list, as they choose.

The guild will offer "Biography," with Ina Claire as heroine, early in October. Its two other plays will be selected from the following list of plays, now on its production schedule: "Ah, Wilderness," by Eugene O'Neill; "Mary of Scotland," by Maxwell Anderson; "The School for Husbands," by Molière, adapted by Arthur Guiterman and Lawrence Langner; "Days Without End," by Eugene O'Neill; "Gentlewoman," by John Howard Lawson; "Jig-Saw," by Dawn Powell; "Sarah Simple," by A. A. Milne; "Winesburg, Ohio," by Sherwood Anderson and Arthur, Barton; "The Purple Testament," by John Haynes Holmes and Reginald Lawrence; "Native Ground," by Virgil Geddes; "They Shall Not Die," by John Wexley, and "No Good End," by William D. Judson Jr.

The American Theater society's share of the program will consist of "The Nobel Prize," by Hjalmar Bergman, with Otis Skinner as star; a play by Claire Kummer with Roland Young as star, staged by Max Gordon, and one other play to be selected from the offerings by John Golden, Gilbert Miller, Lee Shubert, Brock Pemberton, Dwight Deere Wiman, William A. Brady, and Magowan and Reed.

"Skidding" will end its run at the Studebaker theater next Saturday night. Harry Minturn, manager of that playhouse, has changed his mind about presenting a revival of "The Monster." Another production probably will appear at the Studebaker, however, within the next two weeks.

"Dixie to Harlem," the Negro revue that the Illinois theater recently announced for a première this week, has become a question mark on the playgoing calendar. The management coyly refrains from explanation of its intentions.

Changes in the cast of Pauline Frederick's "Her Majesty, the Widow," at the Cort, as of last night: Boyd Irwin, leading man, has been succeeded by Thomas Chatterton, who formerly acted the rôle of the judge, and Willard Vincent has assumed the latter character.

Veloz and Yolanda, dancing stars of the cabaret entertainment in the Empire room of the Palmer house since the opening of the Fair, will end their engagement Sept. 20. Veloz will then enter a hospital for a tonsillectomy and treatment for arthritis. The team will not return to Chicago this season.

First Concert Announced for Oct. 5.

Mrs. Marshall's son, Fielding Marshall Jr., is back in Winnetka after a long summer holiday, during which he spent most of his time recovering from a sprained ankle.

Nelson Levings at Lake Forest.

The Joseph W. Cummings of Lake Forest have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Trimble Levings, whose home is the Levingshire plantation at Moorhead, Miss. Before her marriage in the late summer of 1925 Mrs. Levings was the former Helen Hopkins, daughter of Mrs. Claude C. Hopkins and the late Mr. Hopkins of Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Levings have come to Chicago from Spring Lake, Mich., where they have been spending the last fortnight at the summer home of Mrs. Hopkins.

Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor with her children is deserting Lake Forest this week for the nation's capital where she will join her husband, who already has assumed his new position in the department of agriculture. The Chatfield-Taylors have found a rambling old house in Georgetown which they have leased until next June. Then Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor will return with her children for a summer in Lake Forest.

Tomorrow Miss Geraldine Foster will be back in Chicago to renew acquaintance with her family, the George B. Fosters, after an absence of more than a year, and to inspect the shining new apartment they have just moved into at 1362 Astor street.

Miss Foster went to Les Fougeres in Switzerland to study last year and she had ideas of prolonging her residence abroad another year, but then the thought of home and the World's Fair was too much and she cabled her family she was ready to return. It has been definitely decided by her parents that she will not be a debutante of this season, but will return the end of this month to the Girls' Latin school for her senior year.

Wheelers Return from Michigan.

Mrs. Robert G. Wheeler and her daughter, Miss Winifred Wheeler, and son, Robert T. Wheeler, all returned from Harbor Point, Mich., yesterday. Mrs. Warren C. Fairbanks also arrived in town as did her daughter, Miss Cornelia Fairbanks. Mrs. Fairbanks came from Atlantic City, and Miss Fairbanks from California.

Col. and Mrs. Charles C. Haffner and the Wesley M. Dixons are back in their respective homes after spending three weeks on a ranch in Wyoming. They went out with the William P. Sidleys and the Frederick W. Copelands, who will not be returning for another fortnight.

The Ayres Boals have returned to their Winnetka home from Charlevoix with their son, Thomas, and daughter, Miss Henrietta Boal. Mrs. Boal's mother, Mrs. Lorenzo Johnson, returned at the same time from Santa Barbara, where she has been spending the summer. Her daughter and son-in-law, the George B. Masseys, who were with Mrs. Johnson in California, are motoring back to Chicago arriving here this week. Miss Boal has been admitted to Vassar college with honors and will be going east shortly to begin her studies.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Peabody Butler and their daughter, Jessica, have just returned from Nantucket, and are staying with Mr. Butler's mother, Mrs. Hermon B. Butler, in Winnetka. Mrs. Francis Butler and Miss Jessica are sailing Saturday for England, where they will join the Butlers' other daughter, Miss Deborah Butler, who has been abroad all summer. Jessica will attend the Northforeland school in Kent and Mrs. Butler and Deborah will remain in Europe for the winter. Mr. Butler will be with his mother during the cold months.

Alice Schwab Visits Cousins.

Miss Alice Schwab, daughter of the Gustav Schwabs of New York, is visiting her cousins, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Donald F. McPherson in Winnetka. Miss Schwab will be here until the middle of the week. Miss Fanny McPherson is sailing the 26th for France. She is going to live with a French family in Paris this winter and continue her studies at the Sorbonne. Donald Jr., will be leaving Chicago at about that time to return to the Lawrenceville school.

Miss Mary Louise Morris, president of the senior class at Sarah Lawrence college this year, will be leaving about the 19th to return to college; for, although classes do not start until the 22d, she has to be on the campus before that to welcome the new girls. Three other Winnetka girls who attend the same college will be going east with her, Miss Allene Withers, Miss Patricia Calkins, and Miss Nancy Harris.

Tell Engagement of Miss Ellwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Perry Ellwood of De Kalb and Lake Geneva, Wis., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Patience Allen Ellwood, to Joseph Walter Towle Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Towle of Potosi, Mo. Miss Ellwood is a graduate of the University School for Girls in Chicago and the Spence school in New York. Mr. Towle was graduated from the Principia school in St. Louis and Lehigh university. No date for the wedding has been set.

Patou's Flair Given to Black, White Harmony

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The old tried and true mixture of black with a dash of white for evening is being okayed by the biggest Paris dressmakers for fall nights. These creators have to give us our black and its accompanying white dash with some fresh spirit to make it palatable, and this is just what Jean Patou has done.

The ensemble illustrated in our sketch today shows the Patou blend of this color scheme. The frock is one of those simple models that has the biggest percentage of chic in a limited wardrobe. A streamline body, molded almost to the knees and then flared at the bottom of the skirt by circular cutting is all there is to the dress below the bust.

The material is a stiff, black satin, and the tie-on sash which holds the waistline is made of the same material. It is around the top of the bodice that Patou applies the white, and does it in a new way. The softest and most pliable white crêpe satin is used for the ruffle which edges the décolleté, and white crêpe satin makes the soft rope that is the shoulder straps. This rope is passed around the back of the neck.

WEDDING

Miss Marion Laird will be married at 11 o'clock this morning at Christ church 65th street and Woodlawn avenue, to the Rev. John S. Higgins, rector of the Church of the Advent. Bishop George Craig Stewart will perform the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Walter S. Bihler, rector of Christ church.

Miss Laird will be attended by her sister, Miss Jean Laird and Miss Alice Higgins of Cleveland, a sister of the bridegroom. The Rev. Mr. Higgins is to have his brother, Ralph Higgins of Cleveland, for his best man. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast will be served at the Christ church rectory.

Pride Is Cold Comfort for a Wrecked Home

But Reconciliation Means New Set of Values.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

She's married, has two small children—but has been separated from her husband for five months. Obviously loves the man; doesn't want to divorce him nor have him divorce her. It was in-law trouble that brought about the separation. The man has been seen about with another woman, but the wife does not believe there is anything serious about it. What she wants to know is if it would be bad for her to let her husband know she is now willing to forget, kiss and make up.

There doesn't seem to be any question about the wife's move. The only thing we'd urge is that she waste no time about reclaiming her man, since he's the one and only after all. Another suggestion we'd make is that she tell him she's now willing to pull out from under her mother's roof and take pot luck with him.

It's easier to persuade a husband under such circumstances that there are chances of making good again minus the disturbing in-law than continuing on under the same old atmosphere.

We realize fully how many of the current domestic troubles, born of in-law difficulties, are well nigh impossible to combat because of the unemployment element that holds old and young under a shared roof. But where there has been a break, where the man has left the wife or the wife the husband and they want to begin all over again, the only way to make it possible is to set up a ménage of their own. No matter how humble—let it be their own—and as far away as possible from interfering relatives.

We've all gone through pretty difficult times the last couple of years. All have had to make adjustments and readjustments, get a new sense of values and overlook a lot of the things that formerly we felt permitted to complain about.

Unless a woman who has quarreled with her husband to the separation point gets herself a new set of values, we doubt if she'll make the reconciliation grade. She must go into the reunion in a different state of mind—and heart. Try to appreciate the decent qualities the man has and be more generally amiable about trying to get on with what he has.

There's no question, however, about the wisdom of an attempted reconciliation where the cause of the trouble is known to be outside influences. As for it being bad to let the husband know the wife is willing to try again—it's worse for all concerned, the woman, particularly, if her silly pride restrains her from making the first move.

After all, the youngsters' right to a home, their happiness, as well as the man's and woman's, is a lot more important than a pride that has nothing in it but a stubborn vanity.

Reader Asked to Collaborate on Book Lists

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Several years ago when this column was young the mothers who were reading it at that time collaborated with me to great purpose. We were in need of bedtime prayers to take the place of "No I lay me," in its old version, with its fear-inspiring last two lines. We also wanted a prayer for older children which was more within their grasp than "Our Father." In addition, there was a great demand for graces for children of different ages.

The readers of this column responded so generously I was able to compile from their contributions an excellent booklet of "Prayers and Graces," one I think worthy of real book form.

While working on my list of books for boys and girls of high school age it occurred to me it would be much more valuable if people from all walks of life and from different parts of the country helped in the making of it. I, for instance, can't help being governed by my own taste and the tastes of young people I know. I also have access to an interesting record of children's comments on books kept by the librarian of a progressive school. Still, I feel my list would gain in its general appeal if it came from more varied sources.

So if your boys and girls in their middle teens have found certain books entertaining reading, or if you remember books you liked at that age and think our modern youngsters would like them, too, it would interest me to have the names of the books and authors to consider as additions to my list already made.

And don't think I mean only classics. The book may be a novel written this year, or a yarn a generation or two old. Nothing is excluded: modern poetry, biography, fiction, all are grist for our mill.

In writing please mention the age at which your son or daughter read and enjoyed the book.

And, on second thought, if your children are in-betweens—that is, from 8 to 12 or 13—and you are enthusiastic about some volume they have liked, you might send that name in, also. The list for the in-betweens is the next one I shall work on.

ECONOMY SAVED SCHOOLS, SAYS PARENTS' GROUP

Improvement in Housing Cited by Pamphlet.

Support for every item of the board of education's 32 point economy program is announced in a pamphlet just published by the Parents' Public School association. The group, of which Mrs. Harvey A. Tyler is president, finds some of the measures in the program highly constructive and others needed in the financial crisis of the school system.

The association declared that the economy program has not wrecked the schools, but in reality has saved them from a complete collapse.

"Essentials have been left on which a fine program can be built when and if the ability to pay for it is reëstablished," read the pamphlet, "and better housing facilities have been provided than have been in effect for some years."

"Jobs" and "Bureaus" Sacrificed.

A careful study of the program, Mrs. Tyler and her group asserted, will show that "jobs" and "bureaus" have been sacrificed in the interest of instruction of the children. The educational department, it was claimed, with its temporary certificates and sabbatical leaves, offers a greater opportunity for "jobs" than the other departments.

"The major economies had to be effected in the education department," the pamphlet set forth in its introduction, "because the deficit is in the education tax fund. Our school program had expanded far beyond any reasonable ability of the taxpayer to pay."

The publication takes up next comments made by Prof. Henry Morrison of the school of education at the University of Chicago.

"If our schools are to be kept out of bankruptcy, nonessential and accessory enterprises such as public entertainment, poor relief, preschool experimentations, professional and trade training, police functions, and curriculum overexpansion must be kept out of the school budget," said Prof. Morrison.

Hits Extraneous Activities.

Another statement of the educator was as follows: "A school system is overexpanded not only when its enterprises or program of study, or both, have become broader in scope than the tax base will warrant, but also when undertakings are present which are not required by the purpose of the school as a civil and social institution."

The association termed the elimination of the junior high school system of instruction "a sound, constructive, educational measure," for the catapulting of the junior high building program into the public school system was the beginning of the breakdown of educational integrity.

"It has been demonstrated that the cost is prohibitive in building, maintenance, operation and education," said the parents' group.

Crane Junior college, closed as an economy measure by the school board, could serve only a small percentage of graduates of the public schools, it was set forth, and where compulsory elementary and high school education is being curtailed there is no justification for trying to maintain a junior college.

Vocational Guidance by Teachers.

In connection with the discontinuance of the vocational guidance bureau the association expressed the opinion that vocational guidance is valuable, but to be effective should be done by the classroom teacher who has the opportunity of knowing the child from daily contact. The title of special investigator in this bureau has "a great deal of éclat but we can well do without them," according to the parents' group.

The recommendation that no elementary principal have fewer than two schools does not inject a new policy, the parents declared. It was recalled that many elementary principals have had two schools for some years, and that high school principals have had from one to four branches for years. The group explained that this form of administration was not favorable, but that it was to be supported because of the emergency.

HANGS SELF IN ROOM.

David Clark, 65 years old, hanged himself yesterday in his room at 1457 West Adams street, after writing a note in which he expressed fear that he was going blind.

INJURED IN FALL

MRS. ANNE WHELAN KAHN.
[Acme Photo.]

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Mrs. Anne Elizabeth Whelan Kahn, tobacco heiress and former wife of Gilbert H. Kahn, son of the banker Otto H. Kahn, fell three stories from the bedroom window of her apartment at 784 Park avenue this morning. She suffered a fractured right hip and internal injuries. A nurse who was visiting her grasped her chemise, trying to save her, but failed when it ripped.

Disregarding her pain, the 30 year old society matron insisted she be removed from the sidewalk before a crowd had time to collect.

"I don't want to be stared at," she reiterated.

She was lifted into a hall with the assistance of a physician. He arrived in response to an earlier call that Mrs. Kahn had fainted. He arrived at the building just as she fell to the sidewalk at his feet. She later was removed in an ambulance to the Harbor hospital. Her father, Charles Whelan, said that, while her injuries have not been definitely determined, she probably will recover.

FEDERAL AID FOR SCHOOLS URGED BY EDUCATORS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Federal aid for education, not merely in the present emergency, but as a continuing policy, was advocated today in a report issued by the national conference on financing of education.

Sweeping changes are suggested in the report. The 150,000 one room schools which still exist would be erased from the educational picture, supplanted by "central school plants" built under the NRA public works program.

The present school district map of the nation would be obliterated in favor of a map in which minimum rural units would have 1,500 pupils in attendance; urban units 10,000. The average unit now is only 23 square miles in size; requires but 7 teachers.

30,000 COUNTY PUPILS START SCHOOL TODAY

School days for some 30,000 pupils will begin today when approximately one-third of the elementary and high schools in Cook county open for the year's session. More than half of the schools in the 200 suburban school districts opened last Tuesday. Some others will not open until a week from today.

The half million public school children in Chicago will not return to class rooms until next Monday.

The grade schools opening today include those in Evanston, Wilmette, Kenilworth, Winnetka, Glencoe, and Lake Forest. Among the high schools that will open are the Oak Park, River Forest, and Evanston Township.

CUBS WHIP PHILS TWICE; CAMILLI HITS HOMER

RALLIES TO WIN FROM CRAWFORD IN FIVE SETS

Britain's 1st Victory Since 1903.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 10.—(AP)—With a sudden dynamic surge that swept everything before him and broke up an otherwise close battle for points, Frederick J. Perry of England whipped Jack Crawford of Australia in five sets today for the tennis championship of the United States.

An American gallery of 14,000, little short of a capacity crowd for the second all foreign contest for the national singles title in history, watched the fiery Perry come from behind to win by scores of 6-3, 11-13, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

Perry, proving himself one of the greatest match players of modern tennis, smashed Crawford's 1933 winning streak when the Australian was almost within sight of achieving the unprecedented "grand slam" of tennis. Crawford previously had captured the Australian, French, and Wimbledon singles championships.

First English Victory Since 1903.

Perry is the first Englishman in 30 years to capture the most coveted crown of American tennis. In succeeding the two time former title holder, Ellsworth Vines, who had passed out of the picture in the fourth round, the lithe, slim 24 year old Briton duplicated the feat achieved in 1903 by Hugh L. Doherty.

Perry and Crawford were distinctly the players of the year and the class of the tournament, which saw America's last hopes fade abruptly Saturday through the defeat of Frank Shields and Lester Stoefen in the semi-finals. For three sets they waged a close and frequently exciting contest for points, in which the fortunes shifted with highly dramatic swiftness.

Breaks Favor Crawford.

In the long and bitterly fought second set, the breaks finally went to Crawford and he looked like the winner when he also took the third set with a masterful display of tactics. There were dramatic moments that favored him in each of three sets, just when it seemed as if Perry, the aggressor throughout, was about to complete his command of the match.

In the 22d game of the long second set Perry was within two points of winning, only to have Crawford rally behind a series of forcing shots to save his service. In tme 23d game Perry led, 40-30, as Crawford whirled to make a spectacular return of a difficult shot behind the baseline. As he completed the stroke Crawford fell, much as he had done the day before, and landed flat on the turf. Perry was at the net, his racquet poised for a "killing" return, only to plop the ball into the net.

Losing his poise and control for the first time, the Briton double-faulted, lost his service and threw away the 24th game with wild returns, enabling Crawford to square the match and forge ahead with more confidence.

Decision Against Perry.

Another unusual incident marked Perry's loss of the third set. Perry trailed 30-40 as Crawford drove a looping shot toward the baseline. Perry stood poised for the return, then changed his mind, let the ball go and turned to the linesman, apparently expecting the call "out." Instead the linesman signified the shot was good. It gave the game to Crawford, who quickly capitalized the "break" by winning his own service in the tenth game.

Something happened to both players between sets. Perry came back to sweep everything before him in two lightning sets while Crawford, despite a commanding lead, tired and had his defense shot to pieces. The Australian, whether or not his twice-twisted left knee troubled him, obviously lacked the stamina for the full route. His famous backhand, which had been under severe pressure from the outset, cracked completely and his service, too, fell apart.

Forehand Perry's Best.

Perry's best and most decisive shot was a forehand drive, usually delivered on the run, with a leaping finish, and directed at Crawford's backhand corner. Repeatedly the Briton saved himself with this shot in tight places and its repetition finally broke Crawford's backhand resistance.

Perry, whose two singles victories were decisive factors in returning the Davis cup to England this year, never had won a national singles championship previously, at home or abroad. The best he had ever done in the American tournament previously was to reach the semi-finals in 1931, when he lost to Vines. He previously had lost two out of three matches with Crawford.

The Briton is the fourth foreigner in 52 years to capture the American title. Doherty was the first, in 1903. Then the French enjoyed a holiday as Rene Lacoste was victorious in 1926-'27 and Henri Cochet emerged on top in 1928.

In an exhibition match between the two "infant prodigies" of this country and Australia, Frankie Parker of Milwaukee, Wis., defeated Vivian McGrath, the two-handed backhander, by scores of 6-0, 3-6, 7-5.

Yet Building Up Future Business Is Swell Under NRA

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Two rugged young individuals, Barney Ross and Tony Canzoneri, are planning some unrestricted competition for the lightweight championship of the world in a fifteen round fight at the Polo grounds Tuesday evening.

BENNY LEONARD.

There is no suggestion up to this time that if either of the boys seems to be fighting more efficiently than the other at any stage of the contest then that one will be asked to fight in a restrained manner to permit the other to catch up, according to the spirit of the NRA. Such things have occurred in the prize fight trade in the past, but the customers did not approve. It is doubtful that the spirit of coöperation and neighborliness between business rivals in the ring ever will appeal to the citizens.

Mr. Leonard Disclaims the Waltz.

When Benny Leonard was lightweight champion he was so far superior to most of his rivals that there were some contests in which he seemed to be saving his opponents for future contests by a process which was known as the waltz. This was a great compliment to Mr. Leonard's professional skill and it embarrassed him to have to disagree. Still, he could not accept such praise because, aside from the immodesty of admitting that he was that good, to do so would have been to admit that he had not inflicted the utmost possible bodily harm on his rivals.

That would have meant that he had not put forth his best efforts and that would have constituted a dark blot on the fair escutcheon of the ennobling sport of prize fighting and a stain on the professional reputation of Benny Leonard. So one had to be very cautious in paying Mr. Leonard such compliments in print lest, in showering him with great praise, one should accidentally violate the libel laws. Leonard is one of the few human beings whom it has been possible to defame with phrases of a generally laudatory effect.

Benny Believes in Booming Business.

It never was thought, of course, that Benny swung into a waltz with an opponent out of sympathy for the opponent. If he was guilty of the forbearance which some of his admirers sometimes suspected, his motives were consistent with the purposes of the NRA long before any one suspected that there would ever be any need for the NRA.

The motive ascribed to him was not mere sentimental pity for an opponent, which would be out of place in the hearts of sound business men, of whom Mr. Leonard was one. The motive ascribed to Benny was future business. An opponent who was knocked out was scratched off the list of eligibles. If they were all knocked out business collapsed, as a pugilist can not draw any customers fighting solo.

Leonard Could Tell All Now.

If Benny were at the top of his career today he could gracefully admit the truth of the rather dark suspicions of those days and take his place as a patriotic leader in the NRA movement, Mr. Leonard could say, "It is true that I did not inflict the greatest possible bodily harm on Rocky Kansas last night, but I considered it my patriotic duty to save him for several more fights which will bring out large bodies of customers and put much money into circulation."

In the case of Ross, the current champion, and Canzoneri, from whom he won the title by a close margin in Chicago earlier in the season, it is

ROSS FLASHES TITLE SPEED IN LAST WORKOUT

At Peak for Canzoneri Fight Tomorrow.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lake Swannanoa, N. J., Sept. 10.—Barney Ross finished preparations here today for defense of his lightweight championship Tuesday night at the Polo grounds against Tony Canzoneri, Broadway's favorite who surrendered the title to Barney at Chicago last June. Barney ended his training in a blaze of speed which demonstrated his condition and tonight he was supremely confident he will retain his honors.

Phil Rafferty, who was New York's Intercity Golden Gloves champion in 1929, the year in which Barney won the featherweight title at Madison Square Garden, and young Joe Walker were the instruments on whom Barney sharpened his ring weapons for a last time. Ross had speed in his four rounds today. He punched and countered, stepped in to carry his attack to the body with blows which a heavier man than Canzoneri might fear, and accomplished all with a deftness and lightness of foot that made him the favorite in the title fight with every critic who saw him work.

Barney Quiet, Confident.

Ross' confidence in his ability is not blatant. He sincerely believes he is an abler fighter than Canzoneri, perhaps no better than the Canzoneri who knocked out Jack [Kid] Berg two years ago, but better than the Canzoneri of 1933.

Tonight Ross and his retinue broke camp at Lake Swannanoa. They motored to Manhattan, where Barney, except for brief exercises tomorrow at Stillman's gym, will hide out from well wishers and the curious until he meets Canzoneri at the offices of the New York athletic commission Tuesday afternoon to weigh in.

This morning Barney made a leisurely excursion about the 1,000 acre estate of the late Al Ringling, which has been his headquarters. Art Winch, the rotund, effervescent manager-trainer, and Issy Klein accompanied Barney. A strong northern breeze whipped from the New Jersey hills down Berkshire valley, making most welcome the warm rays of the September sun.

Won't Be Nervous This Time.

Ross is quiet. Although the center of a crowd of hundreds of friends and visitors today, he kept his even tempered course. At noon he took a short nap before donning the padded gloves for the last time. Those who had thought Canzoneri might have a mental advantage marveled at Barney's coolness. Apparently he has no worries. He's only two pounds over the weight, a simple matter of drying out in the last 24 hours. He has come through his training without a mark.

Neither is Ross temperamentally unfitted to spend the remaining hours waiting. He'll be as calm two hours before he enters the ring as he has been during the training period.

"I was a bit nervous before I faced Canzoneri at Chicago," Barney remarked this morning. "I kept telling myself I could beat Tony but I wasn't certain until I finished the first half of the bout. Now I am certain I can beat him. It may be I can't, but I feel that I can. I am in condition. Fifteen rounds will not make any difference. Indeed, I think I am better able to fight for 45 minutes than is Canzoneri."

Tony to Work for K. O.

For all the printed items that Canzoneri will have superior stamina and an advantage in fighting in his own back yard, his training camp tactics at Pompton Lakes have not been calculated to bear out this premise. Canzoneri has consistently favored his right hand, an indication, smart observers say, that he hopes to win before the tenth round by a knockout.

Advance receipts for the title bout have reached $50,000, indicating that New York probably will pay $100,000 to see the championship decided. This latter figure would net Ross $34,000. Two-thirds of this will be Barney's, and we are told he intends to use it as a nucleus of a trust fund.

U. S. TITLE GOES TO BRITON

It's Fonseca's Turn to Chase a Player Home

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 10.—Ed Durham, White Sox right hand pitcher, who yesterday stood agape in the pitchers' box at Washington and watched Third Baseman Jimmy Dykes chase Manager Joe Cronin of the Senators across the uncovered plate with a tying run, this morning was shipped to Chicago in the hope, perhaps, that the crisp lake air will do him good.

ED DURHAM.

There was some mumbling about sore arms, stomach aches, etc., etc., when reasons for Durham's precipitate banishment were sought, but to those who witnessed Ed's astounding demonstration of inertia and the speedy manner in which Manager Fonseca chased his pitcher immediately after Dykes chased Cronin today's action was looked upon as a disciplinary move.

It is the consensus that the White Sox pitching staff is bad enough when the members thereof are wide awake. Snoozing, they exhaust the patience of even such a Spartan as Manager Fonseca. Durham's series of diversified miseries, which have made him work shy, had been met with sympathetic consideration. His startling inefficiency yesterday, however, was something else again, especially when it was reported that he sought to shift the blame for one of the most ludicrous situations in baseball.

Durham, when feeling right mentally and physically, is one of the most talented of the second flight of American league pitchers. If the Cubs fail to win the National league pennant and challenge the White Sox for a city series Manager Fonseca will need the services of the moody South Carolinian.

Despite his many agonies this year Durham has won nine of the Sox's 61 victories and has contributed only six losses to the team's total of 75 setbacks. Some of his victories have been brilliant but since he won his ninth game to top his four year major league record, the best season of which showed 8 wins and 10 losses he has complained of many ills. Durham was not the only member of the White Sox who escaped Philadelphia today. About half of the squad went to Philipsburg, Pa., for an exhibition game.

Tomorrow afternoon the Sox will play the Athletics in a double header, with Ted Lyons and Joe Heving scheduled to take care of the Chicago pitching interests. Grove and Marcum probably will pitch for Connie Mack, it is said.

During the last week the Athletics, particularly Jimmy Foxx, have been on a rampage in an effort to get in third place in the American league race. Despite this the Sox will meet them, fortified with the knowledge that so far this season they have defeated the A's 11 games in 18 played.

Double Victory Fails to Shorten Odds Against Cubs

The Cubs' double victory yesterday sustained their gasping pennant hopes but didn't increase their chances of catching up with the leading Giants. As a matter of fact the odds against the Cubs were increased. The Giants also won two and the time in which they can be overtaken, if at all, was cut down by one day.

The Giants now lead the second place Cubs by 7½ games and the third place Pirates by 8 games. The Giants still have 21 to play, the Cubs 16, and the Pirates 17.

If both the Cubs and Pirates should happen to win all their remaining games they would finish with a mark of 93 wins and 61 defeats. The Giants could tie this by capturing only 11 of the 21 still to be played.

Should the Cubs and Pirates win all their games except three their final percentage would be 90 wins and 64 losses. The Giants could finish with 91 wins and 63 defeats by taking only 9 of their 21 remaining games. The Cubs' sole hope is to sweep the six game series starting with the Giants here Wednesday.

AMATEURS START PLAY TODAY FOR U. S. GOLF TITLE

Goodman and Somerville Among Favorites.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 10.—The props are set and the orchestra ready for the curtain to roll up tomorrow on the first act of the 37th annual amateur show of the United States Golf association at the Kenwood Country club, and there are those among the critics who believe it will be the greatest dramatic tournament since the great Bobby Jones strode the boards.

Among the cast of 157 amateur stars, hailing from New York to California and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, are the names of all the great and near great in amateur golf. There is Ross [Sandy] Somerville of London, Ont., the taciturn Canadian who took the championship trophy from this republic last year for the second time in the thirty-seven years' history of the tournament. There is Johnny Goodman, the straw haired national open champion from Omaha, whose presence insures the tournament of more drama than has been written into the regular routine of the play.

Field of High Caliber.

It was Somerville who defeated Goodman in last year's final match at Baltimore, and it is Goodman who will be the first open title holder to compete in the national amateur since 1930, when Jones won both.

The perfect ending to this year's show, of course, would be a second championship argument between Goodman and Somerville, but those who have been scanning the rehearsal performance of others in the program are of the opinion that the two champions may miss their lines before they ever reach the final, and Sandy and Johnny themselves are not the least dubious of these, both recognizing the exceptional caliber of this year's field.

The script calls for 18 holes tomorrow and 18 holes on Tuesday. The low 32 scorers at that point will then enter the match play rounds, two of which will be played at 18 holes each on Wednesday. The quarter-finals Thursday, the semi-finals Friday, and the championship match Saturday all will be over 36 holes.

Dunlap a Contender.

Even though Goodman and Somerville were missing from the cast of characters the 1 33 tournament would still be a great show. Among those waiting in the wings tonight is the slender George Dunlap of New York, probably the most improved of the ranking players of the country within the last year.

The 135 pound blond, who won the national intercollegiate two years in succession when he played for Princeton, has graduated from the bantamweight to lightweight class in poundage, and is playing the best golf of his career. He demonstrated that earlier this summer by going to the semi-finals of the difficult British amateur before being eliminated by the ultimate champion, and is now regarded as a great possibility to be swinging clubs as far as Saturday.

Then, too, there are the five former champions, who should know a thing or two about trooping through a national tournament. They are H. Chandler Egan of 1904 and 1905, Chick Evans of 1916 and 1920, Jesse Guilford of 1921, Jess Sweetser of 1922, and Max Marston of 1923.

The one tragic note of the tournament was sounded today when a bespectacled gentleman of 40 came out to Kenwood to watch those practicing. He is Francis Ouimet, the champion of 1914, who struggled for seventeen years before he crashed through again at Beverly in 1931. Ouimet failed to qualify for this year's tournament in the sectional trial at Boston, losing ironically enough to Guilford in a playoff of three extra holes for the last qualifying place from the Boston district.

The youth versus age theme is also receiving plenty of attention in the advance guessing on tomorrow's tournament. Statisticians are prying into the records due to the fact that Egan is 49 years old: Evans, 43: Mars-

Talking it Over

BY ARCH WARD.

GEORGE HALAS, owner, president, manager, and coach of the Chicago Bears, National Professional football champions, reports that demands for tickets to the exhibition game with the Notre Dame All Stars at Soldiers' field next Saturday afternoon are the heaviest the Bears have had since Thanksgiving, 1925, when Red Grange made his professional debut.

GEORGE HALAS.

The flurry of excitement attending the game is not easy to understand. Maybe there are some who believe it will be the long awaited test between college and professional football. Possibly it is the fans' eagerness to see whether or not the Bears have another championship team in the making. More than likely it is because the opposing team is from Notre Dame.

Somehow Chicago for years has felt that Notre Dame is its team. The largest crowds football has known were the gatherings that swarmed into Soldiers' field to see Rockne's athletes play Southern California, the Army and the Navy. It got to the point where you couldn't buy a ticket the day of the game without hocking the family jewels. The name Notre Dame was all that was needed to convince the fans that the attraction was big league stuff. The records show that Notre Dame never failed to wow 'em.

All the young men who will engage the professional champions of the United States Saturday afternoon are graduates summa cum laude, cum laude, or just graduates of Notre Dame. They are training under Heartley Anderson, who soon will start his third year as successor to Rockne.

Some famous old Celtic names again will grace the Notre Dame lineup. O'Kozac will be at tackle and McSheeketski will play at half. There is an outside chance that O'Schwartz and O'Carideo also will be in the backfield.

If you plan to attend the game because you want to see for yourself whether a college team can whip a professional team, or vice versa, you will be disappointed, because there is no such test involved. If you stay away because you are outraged at the idea of Notre Dame permitting its name to be used on the same field with a professional team, you are unduly exercised.

The Bears annually play two or three practice games before opening their league schedule. It happens that a team of former Notre Dame players will provide the opposition in one of these preliminary contests this season. It should prove far more entertaining than the average practice game.

There is only one way of deciding whether or not a championship college team can whip a leading professional club. That is to take the strongest, or at least a representative college squad, at the end of its regular season and send it against the championship pro outfit.

The team that will face the Bears Saturday is by no stretch of the imagination representative of the best in college football. Several of the players have been out of school three or four years. Most of the others are from last year's squad, which was defeated twice. In all probability the Notre Dame backfield will have Vejar at quarter back, Koken and Sheeketski at the halves and Leahy at full back. How do you think they compare with the Bears' backfield of Grange, Nagurski, Ronzani, and Brumbaugh? Neither do I.

The game will serve its purpose, however, which is to give you an idea of the strength of the Bears. It ought to provide as many thrills as the recent East-West contest on the same field.

Cohn, Shostrom, Jane Lane Win City Tennis Titles

Jay Cohn, Charles Shostrom, and Jane Lane were the winners in the junior boys' and girls' tennis championships of Chicago yesterday at Hamilton park. Cohn defeated Johnny Shostrom, 6-4, 6-2, 7-5; Charles Shostrom won from Arthur Jorgenson, 6-4, 6-4, and Miss Lane defeated Alice Curtis, 5-7, 9-7, 6-2.

TINNING WINS, 4 TO 0; NELSON VICTOR, 4 TO 2

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Cubs came up with a big bag full of tricks which mystified the Phillies yesterday in both portions of a double header by 4 to 0 and 4 to 2. First the pitching of bulky Bud Tinning, along with a few timely hits, lulled the tourists in to a state of feebleness. Then Lynn Nelson stepped into the setting with a four hit performance, which Adolph Camilli, the newcomer, clinched with a homer and which Bill Jurges enlivened a bit by endeavoring to use his spikes on Dick Bartell.

Tinning's big source of help in the opener came from Billy Herman, Ki Cuyler, and Frank Demaree, the latter being actively employed because Manager Grimm preferred not to look at Babe Herman after the misdeeds accomplished by the latter on the previous days. The aforementioned trio shook up Flint Rhem with a series of hits in the fourth. That took care of all the scoring of the game, barring an inside the park homer to which flashy Stanley Hack helped himself in the first inning.

Camilli Clinches Victory.

Nelson had a job on his hands in the second battle, at least until Camilli came through with his first big league hit. The Phils, by getting the maximum production from a few hits, led for a few moments and then climbed back into a tie after the wildness of Frank Pearce had forced two runs on the Cubs in the second inning. But after Camilli's homer with a mate on base had broken the deadlock in the sixth Nelson converted himself into a full blooded Scotchman. He did not give up a hit or a pass in the last four innings.

The bit of side play with which Jurges stirred the Phils into threatening gestures during the second game began in the fourth when he slid into second with one foot hoisted as high as Bartell's waist line. Bartell eluded the ungentlemanly maneuver and went about his business. But the Phils immediately began jockeying Jurges from the bench, and the Cub shortstop could not see the humor of it. He retaliated by deliberately throwing two balls into the Phil dugout before the fifth inning started. One of the balls was returned with bullet like speed and almost plunked the Cub belligerent. Then the Phils decided to get tough about it.

Phils Charge; So Do Cubs.

They came over the top of their trench and charged toward short, where Jurges was standing. Jurges rushed forward to meet the charges. Cubs came running from every place except up out of the drain pipes. As usual nothing happened. Umpire Magerkurth jumped between the belligerents, shoved a few this way and a few in that direction and finally restored quiet.

So the boys hung around for a few minutes calling names and then went back to work. Jurges also was guilty of something out of order in the first game. As he passed first base after being thrown out he slapped at Hurst's hands, possibly with the idea he might dislodge the ball.

FIRST GAME

For three innings the Cubs were somewhat gentle in the handling of Rhem's pitching. Only one hit was made off the ex-Cardinal, but it was a hit of consequence. Hack opened the game with a low drive into the wide open space between right and center. Hack, being a speedy young fellow, was rounding third before the relayed throw started for the plate. This induced him to keep on going, and his bid for a homer was crowned with success when the ball came in wide of the plate.

The second Cub hit was a single with which Billy Herman opened the fourth. Rhem immediately found himself in a peck of trouble. Cuyler bunted in front of the plate, and while Rhem and Davis exchanged a couple of funny stories before recalling that

FILLY ESSEFF NEW NOMINEE FOR TURF TITLE

Wins 7, Is Second Twice in 10 Starts.

BY FRENCH LANE.

A new turf champion has come to the front lately in Chicago and has created so little commotion doing it that few except the race track regulars know anything about it.

The new champion is Esseff, queen of the 3 year old fillies of the year, whose title, after her spectacular performances of the last couple of months, hardly can be disputed. The only rival that has a halfway claim is Col. Edward R. Bradley's Barn Swallow.

To settle that argument the Esseff followers can point to the recent Chicago Derby and produce the figures to show that in that race Esseff gave Barn Swallow a most thorough spanking.

Esseff was beaten in the derby by the shock-producing Gay World, but she wasn't beaten badly. Barn Swallow was not only beaten but fairly disgraced by the showing she made.

Any Distance Suits Her.

Since then Esseff has come along to beat a field of older horses in the Lincoln Handicap, including the outstanding Indian Runner. Meanwhile Barn Swallow has been at a stand still. Esseff prove. that any distance suits here when she ran the mile and a sixteenth of the Lincoln in the brilliant time of 1:43 3-5. Earlier in the season she had won the mile and a quarter Latonia Oaks in 2:04 2-5 and carried 116½ pounds when she did it.

Her consistency, which includes seven victories and two seconds in ten starts this year, is the best any 3 year old colt or filly in the country has made. So it isn't at all improbable that she will prove before the fall racing ends that she is the best 3 year old of either sex in America.

Overshadowed by Stablemates.

While well put up in all departments she is of rather a slender effeminate type, which might be the reason she has seldom been taken into consideration when the 3 year old title was discussed.

Then again Esseff was pushed out of the picture during the early half of the season by the spectacular work of two of her youthful stable companions, Mata Hari and Far Star. These young ladies were so much in the spotlight that the other horses in Charles T. Fisher's Dixiana stable were all but forgotten.

Breeders for a long time have been trying to find a blood line which, when crossed with the great speed line of High Time, the sire of Esseff, would produce stayers.

When Dixiana mated High Time with La Belle Helene they may have solved the problem. LeBelle Helene is the daughter of Sardanapale, one of the most famous routers ever produced in France and one of the great stayers of all times.

Might Have Beaten Colts.

Esseff has been developed by Clyde Van Dusen, the trainer of the Dixiana horses. He didn't ask her to race against the colts of her age in such early season stakes as the Kentucky Derby, Preakness, American Derby, and Arlington Classic. The colts proved to be an in and out crowd, however, and many believe Esseff might have beaten them in some of these rich stakes.

Yet training for those races might have sent her to the sidelines, just as it did numerous others which were considered championship possibilities back in the springtime.

Cantigny Farm Four Defeats Fort Sheridan

The Cantigny Farm polo team defeated Fort Sheridan, 9 to 8, yesterday on the Fort Sheridan field. Capt. Maxwell Corpening scored the winning goal in an extra chukker.

After the advantage had seesawed throughout the game, Cantigny held an 8 to 7 lead with a few minutes left to play. Then Maj. C. C. Smith scored for Fort Sheridan, forcing the contest into a ninth period. Little extra time was required, however, for Capt. Corpening took possession of the ball on the throw-in and dribbled down the field to score, terminating the game. Lineups:

CANTIGNY FARM [9].	FORT SHERIDAN [8].
Lieut. L. Smith	No. 1 Capt. C. A. Wilkinson
Capt. M. Corpening	No. 2 Gen. F. Parker
Capt. P. Rodes	No. 3 Capt. C. E. Davis

BY BOB BECKER.

The large water lotus, which is sometimes called the Egytian lotus, can be grown in most any pond or small lake in Chicagoland according to a well known middle western authority on aquatic plants. If this is ture many landowners in Northern Illinois who have ponds either natural or artificial on their acreage, miniature lakes, streams or other fair sized bodies of water, may plant lotus seeds and develop a bed of these magnificent water plants which provide a wonderful show every year in Grass and other lakes of northern Illinois.

Experiments now are being conducted by this department of THE TRIBUNE to see if lotus plants can be grown in three ponds near Wheaton, Ill. We planted about a pound of the blackish brown, round seeds several days ago. It will be late next spring before we know if these seeds germinate and take root successfully. Meantime all information which can be secured on the propagation of the lotus indicates that it is not difficult to start a bed in a body of water. This is reported to be especially true if one uses lotus seeds which have been treated to break down the hard shell which covers the seed.

The giant water lily Nlumbea develops a seed which looks like a hard, round nut about the size of a Concord grape. According to the authorities on aquatic plants, some of these seeds may fall to the bottom of a pond or lake and remain there for years before germinating. Why Nature puts such a durable, water resisting veneer on some of the seeds [thus preventing their development] is one for the book.

Perhaps it is sort of natural selection idea or Nature's way of not getting too many lotus plants to crowd out the older growth. To plant lotus seeds always has been something of a gamble because no one knew how many would germinate. We can picture the disappointment of the early Indians in the Mississippi valley when they carried lotus seeds many miles in order to plant them and start a new bed only to learn later that few germinated. As far as modern science can determine now many of our lotus beds were started in this way, with Indians doing the planting because the lotus was something to be eaten in the old days.

When we planted seeds a few days ago we stuck them in the mud bottom of the ponds in varying depths of water. The deepest water was about arm's length. [The drought has reduced water levels in all ponds in Chicagoland.] However, any one who wants to experiment with the lotus doesn't have to worry much about water depth. The plants have been known to grow in water six feet deep.

Before planting seeds one may test them by placing them in a jar of water. We have done this and already they are germinating.

GIANTS TRIUMPH TWICE AGAINST REDS, 6-1, 2-1

Cincinnati Forces Second Battle to 11 Innings.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 10.—(AP)—The New York Giants trounced Cincinnati, 6 to 1, in the first game of a double header today, but the Reds forced them to go 11 innings in the second before the Giants won, 2 to 1. Hal Schumacher and Ray Kolp engaged in a pitching duel in the second game.

Carl Hubbell, the Giant's star pitcher, proved a big factor in the Giants first victory when he relieved Fred Fitzsimmons in the seventh inning with the bases full and none out and set the Reds down in order.

FRANKIE FRISCH GETS 2,501ST HIT; JOINS LIST OF 5

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 10. — (AP) — Frankie Frisch's four hits today placed him among five major league baseball players who have made more than 2,500 safeties during their careers.

Frisch has made 2,501 hits in 7,821 at bat and scored 1,365 runs in his 15 years in the National league. Only Rogers Hornsby, now managing the St. Louis Browns, Sam Rise of the Washington Senators, Rabbit Maranville of the Boston Braves and Babe Ruth have exceeded this mark. Ty Cobb holds the all time total hit record with 4,191.

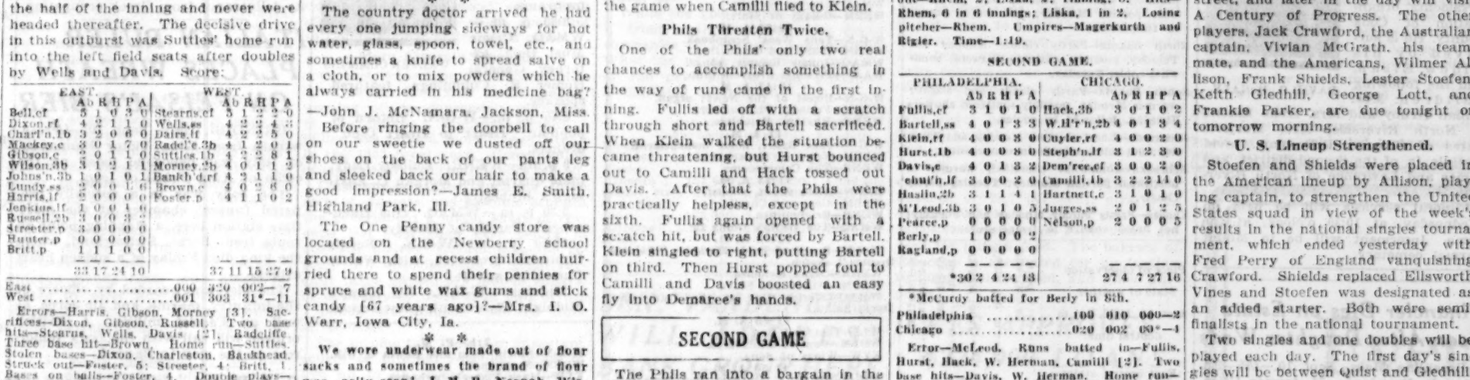
DICK TRACY—Spotted!



West Victor, 11-7, in Negro All-Star Game

The West defeated the East, 11 to 7, yesterday at Comiskey park before a crowd of 15,000 in a game to determine sectional supremacy in Negro baseball. Willie Foster pitched all the way for the winners while his teammates pounded out 15 hits off three pitchers, Streeter, Hunter and Britt.

With the East leading, 3 to 1, as a result of Foster's wildness in the first of the fourth, the Western all-stars rallied for with three tallies in the half of the inning and never were headed thereafter. The decisive drive in this outburst was Suttles' home run into the left field seats after doubles by Wells and Davis. Score:

HOLD FUNERAL SERVICES TODAY FOR DR. CORWIN

Eight years ago Dr. Arthur Mills Corwin, physician, author and poet, wrote an "Ode on Immortality." At 1 o'clock this afternoon the ode will be read as the sermon at his funeral.

Dr. Corwin died Saturday morning in the West Suburban hospital. His death ended a distinguished career. His colleagues regarded him not only a medical expert but a poetic genius, and they called him the Shakespeare of their profession. In his ode he used as a theme the fact that the physical elements of man are resalvaged after his death for "endless cosmic uses," and, therefore, man's spirit must live on eternally.

"How lonesome God would be if He alone had immortality," wrote Dr. Corwin.

The poem is filled with medical and theological references. It asserts that "yonder strutting, muscled men are mostly hydrogen and oxygen." It continues:

I say your house of fleshly brick and mortar
Will soon evaporate like other water.
But all its elements in cells and juices
Resalvaged be for endless cosmic uses.
There's naught that's lost — no particle destroyed
Of all that is, or was, to leave a void.

Another stanza, answering the skeptic who says: "We souls must surely die," reads:

What vaporings, what chattering of apes!
If guessing is the game we're forced to play,
'Twere quite as well to guess the other way.
My body—stuff from dust to dust, you see,
Persists, methinks, with certain dignity.
So if its vibrant atoms cannot die,
Why should this energizing, conscious I?

The two final verses continue this thought:

To classify man's soul a fleeting breath
Forever ended by his so-called death,
Then were mud pies a fitting kin to him
Which children make and break with passing whim.
When human faith and hope and love have died
'Twere time to think of God's own suicide.

Immortal energy and matter, too;
Immortal God, good, beautiful, and true,
Vain these superlatives unless there be
The immortality of you and me.

Dr. Corwin's ode will be read in Graceland cemetery chapel by his friend, Dr. Augustus O'Neill. The officiating minister will be the Rev. A. R. Coe of the Oak Park Congregational church. Parnell Egan, tenor, will sing.

Among those to attend the services will be Dr. Corwin's brother, Charles Abel Corwin, the artist who painted the Field museum murals; his widow, Mrs. Marion Dwyer Corwin; his daughter, Mrs. Mercer Francisco of Detroit; and his stepdaughter, Mary Hastings Bradley, big game hunter and author. Dr. Corwin was 69 years old. He lived at 159 East Ontario street.

Hold Last Rites Today for Mrs. Kate B. Hyatt

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today in the chapel at 2701 North Clark street for Mrs. Kate B. Hyatt, 68 years old, 1927 North Park avenue, who died yesterday at the Woodlawn hospital. Mrs. Hyatt taught in the public schools for thirty-five years. Before her retirement in March, 1931, she had taught at the Gladstone school for 15 years. A son, Garth B. Hyatt, war veteran, was killed in an automobile accident in New Mexico in November, 1931. Another son, Adrian C. Hyatt, survives. Following the services today, the body will be sent to Gilman, Ia., for burial.

GREEK PREMIER IN TURKEY TO SIGN AMITY PACT

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Sept. 10.—(AP)—A Turkish triumphal arch with a welcoming inscription in Greek greeted Premier Tsaldaris of Greece on his arrival today to sign an amity pact between the two countries.

The treaty, which contains military clauses for the defense of frontiers to reinforce the existing friendship accord, will be signed at Ankara where the Greek representative and his suite are proceeding tonight.

The Turkish press praised equally the Turkish and Greek governments for their efforts to establish peace in the Balkans. Oddly the visit today coincided with a celebration by the city of Smyrna of the tenth anniversary of its deliverance from Greek occupation.

ITALIAN RULER PLACES WREATH ON FEISAL'S BIER

BRINDISI, Italy, Sept. 10.—(AP)—A wreath from King Victor Emmanuel of Italy was deposited today on the coffin of King Feisal of Iraq.

The body was in a specially prepared funeral chamber at the maritime station here, a stopping point en route from Berne, Switzerland, where the king died Friday of a sudden heart attack.

The bier was guarded by officers of the infantry, marine, and air corps, as well as Fascist militia. A British cruiser will sail with the body tomorrow on the way to Bagdad.

S. J. Phillips, Son-in-Law of Police Capt. O'Brien, Dead

Sylvester J. Phillips, 29 years old, 2343 Rosemont avenue, a commission merchant, son-in-law of Capt. John J. O'Brien of the North Racine police avenue station, died yesterday of acute appendicitis in the John B. Murphy Memorial hospital. Surviving Mr. Phillips are his widow, Marie, and two children, James and Johanna. Funeral services will be held from Capt. O'Brien's home at 1536 Hood avenue to St. Sylvester's Roman Catholic church, Logan boulevard and Palmer Square, Wednesday morning. Burial will be in St. Boniface cemetery.

H. A. Snyder, 76, Dead; Retired Railroad Official

Harvey A. Snyder, 76 years old, former general freight agent for the Rock Island railroad, died early yesterday in St. Luke's hospital, where he had been ill for four weeks. Mr. Snyder, who retired 16 years ago, lived at the Illinois Athletic club. An adopted daughter, Mrs. Adelaide MacKenzie, 539 East 62d street, survives. The body will lie in the chapel at 7350 Cottage Grove avenue until 2 o'clock tomorrow, when it will be taken to Philadelphia for funeral services Wednesday afternoon.

HOST FOR 150 FALLS ON STAIRS; INJURIES FATAL

New York, Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Allen Russell Atwater, a consulting industrial and textile engineer, died today. He was injured by a fall down a flight of stairs to a concrete floor during a house warming party at his estate near Weston, Conn. last midnight.

He was showing 150 guests from New York and the Westport summer colony through a large remodeled barn and lost his balance at the top of a steep flight of stairs.

Three physicians who were guests at the party worked to save their host, but vainly, for his skull had been fractured.

HOLD LAST RITES TOMORROW FOR DR. AUTENRIETH

Funeral services for Dr. Bernard B. Autenrieth, 50 years old, 4036 North Central avenue, a north side dentist for 23 years, who died at his home Saturday, following an illness of two years, will be held tomorrow at 3 o'clock at 3334 Irving Park boulevard. Dr. Autenrieth was graduated from the University of Illinois School of Dentistry in 1905 and was a member of the Masonic lodge. He is survived by his widow, Luella, his mother, a brother, and a sister. Burial will be in Acacia Park mousoleum.

Mrs. Lorraine Donnell, 83, Evanston Pioneer, Dead

Mrs. Lorraine Donnell, 83 years old, a resident of Evanston for more than 42 years, died yesterday at 3100 Sheridan road, the home of her son, Charles A. Donnell, Chicago manager of the Mosler Safe company. Mrs. Donnell's husband, James W. Donnell, who was president of the Donnell Safe company and a well known Chicago manufacturer of safes and burglar alarm systems, died ten years ago. Funeral services for Mrs. Donnell will be held at Rosehill cemetery chapel at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday.

WORLD'S WHEAT STATUS BETTER, YET PRICE SAGS

Political Moves Dim Normal Factors.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Weakness in the wheat market which developed last week cannot be attributed to the statistical position, according to leading local statisticians. In fact, the supply and demand position has changed so rapidly during the last few months that theoretically the situation is now the strongest in about seven years, despite the record carryover.

Based on Broomhall's estimate on the European and non-European wheat crops and after allowing for a reduction of around 100,000,000 bushels in the Argentine and Australian harvests this season, the so-called world's crop, exclusive of Russia and China, appears to be around 3,375,000,000 bushels. This is the smallest since 1924-'25, as indicated by a comparison with the department of agriculture's compilation for previous years, is nearly 400,000,000 bushels less than harvested in 1932-'33, and compares with a 10 year average of 3,713,000,000 bushels.

Supply 300,000,000 Bushels Less.

After allowing for the world's carryover of 782,000,000 bushels on July 1, 1933, and for possible Russian exports of 40,000,000 bushels, the apparent world's supply for the current season is 4,197,000,000 bushels, or nearly 300,000,000 bushels less than the previous crop. Last season the apparent world's disappearance of wheat was 3,700,000,000 bushels, which is exactly the same as the 10 year average. If the consumption this season equals that of 1932-'33 and the 10 year average, the world's carryover might be cut down to slightly under 500,000,000 bushels, the smallest since 1928.

Those who have analyzed the recent international wheat agreement, whereby the United States, Canada, Argentina, and Australia promised to curtail production of exports 15 per cent for the 1934 crop, feel that the trade has not given this sufficient consideration, especially in view of the probability of a drastic reduction in the world's carryover during the current season.

European Yield Increased.

European countries have agreed not to stimulate production further, so that the record breaking 1933 crop will hardly be repeated. Since 1924 the European crop has been steadily increasing, so that this year's harvest of 1,550,000,000 bushels was roughly 500,000,000 bushels more than at the beginning of the period.

Normally a statistical position such as exists at the present time might have been responsible for a wild bull market. The failure of prices to advance to any great extent suggests to many that there are factors other than supply and demand which more than offset the near failure of the North American crop and the prospective liberal decrease in the southern hemisphere.

The consensus of trade opinion is that the immediate trend of the domestic wheat market will be determined almost entirely by developments at Washington.

Prices for Last Week.

For the week wheat closed with net losses of 4½ to 4¾ cents with September finishing Saturday at 81¼ cents, December at 85 to 85⅛ cents and May at 89¼ to 89⅜ cents. The range of prices last week follows:

	September.	December.	May.
Monday.....	Holiday
Tuesday ...	83⅞-86	87⅝-90⅜	91⅝- 94⅜
Wednesday .	82⅞-85	86⅛-88⅝	90⅜- 92⅝
Thursday ..	83 -84⅝	86⅛-88⅝	90⅜- 92⅝

Season	45¼-1.20	68⅞-1.24	89¼-1.28⅛
1932	46⅝-66⅞	49⅞-66¼	50 - 62⅛

Taking a long range view of the coarse grain and feed situation, many traders are of the opinion that it is merely a question of time before the extremely strong statistical position which exists in corn and oats will assert itself.

Yields Below Consumption.

The aggregate yield of corn, oats, rye, and barley, based on latest official returns, is around 3,124,000,000 bushels. The smallest disappearance in the last 23 years was 3,622,000,000 bushels. With shortage in hay and pastures, necessitating heavier feeding of grain, some of the best posted interests cannot see how supplies can be stretched out sufficiently to take care of all the live stock and still furnish any great amount of commercial grain.

Corn closed Saturday with September at 45⅝ cents, December at 50⅝ to 50½ cents, and May at 56⅝ cents, net losses for the week being 3 to 4⅛ cents. The range of prices follows:

	September.	December.	May.
Tuesday	47 -48⅜	52⅜-54⅞	58½-60⅝
Wednesday ..	46⅜-47⅞	52 -53⅜	57⅝-59⅛
Thursday	46⅜-47⅝	51⅜-53	57⅝-59

Season	26⅝-71⅝	40¼-76¼	53⅛-82
1932	29⅝-45½	30⅜-39½	34⅝-39⅛

Oats Prices Go Lower.

Oats prices dropped 1⅜ to 2 cents for the week with September selling at 35⅝ cents; December, 38⅞ cents, and May, 41⅜ cents at the close on Saturday. The range of prices follows:

	September.	December.	May.
Tuesday	36½-37⅛	39½-40¾	42⅝-43⅜
Wednesday ...	36 -36⅝	39¼-39⅞	42 -42⅝
Thursday	35⅛-36⅛	38⅝-39½	41⅛-42⅝
Friday	34½-36⅛	37½-39⅝	40⅝-42⅝
Saturday	35¼-36⅝	38⅝-39⅝	41⅜-42⅝
For week....	34½-37⅛	37⅛-40⅝	40⅝-43⅜
Prev. week...	35⅝-38½	38 -41⅜	41 -44⅛
Last year....	15⅝-17⅜	17⅜-20	20⅝-22⅜

1932	15⅜-26⅝	17½-25½	20⅝-23

Imports of around 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian rye in the last six weeks had considerable effect on the price of that grain. For the week net losses were 5½ to 7⅝ cents, with December finishing at 69¼ cents and May at 75⅝ cents on Saturday.

A Wet Party Brings an Idea That Cashes In

How a small company specializing in the manufacture of gift specialties expanded its operation. The proprietors gave a party in their apartment one evening. The guests were numerous and glasses were filled frequently. When the evening was over the hosts were too tired to clean up and went to bed with glasses scattered over tables. Came the next morning when the pair started putting things in order. Rings were found on all places where glasses had stood with the exception of one table which had been given a special finish for the artistic effect. As a result the partners are pushing the sale of tables finished in this style with a more than fair amount of success.

The death a few days ago of J. Berlovitz, an Indiana farmer of Polish Jewish extraction, removed from the grain trade one of its largest operators who was little known outside of the trade.

Berlovitz was unable to read or write but he is known to have handled single transactions involving a million bushels of wheat and 10,000 shares of stock. Berlovitz came to Chicago 19 years ago and obtained his first job at the Kirk soap factory, then located in Michigan avenue at the river.

Roast little pig with an apple in its mouth used to be a Yuletide dish, but this year some of the people who have contacts at the stock yards are having it on Labor day. Reason: Many of the farmers have been shipping in pigs too small to qualify for the 25 pound minimum called for in Secretary Wallace's hog relief plan. Whereas the pigs weighing from 25 to 30 pounds collect the government bonus and sell for 9½ cents per pound, the smaller piglets collect no bonus and command no market. They're sold for what they will bring—about one cent a pound. A 23 pound pig can be bought for 23 cents. Dressing brings the cost per pig up to about a dollar for the fellow who wants roast little pig.

Signs of the times: The Investment Bankers' Association of America, which includes in its membership most of the important banks and investment houses in the country, has condensed its national headquarters into smaller space in the First National Bank building. "We're economizing," says an official.

Improvement in railroad earnings has strengthened the market for railroad equipment trust certificates, according to La Salle street houses handling these securities. Prices of the obligations of certain railroads have increased to a point where they are now selling on a yield basis of 6 per cent, compared with 10 per cent a few months ago.

In a talk to farmers Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has stressed the need for coöperation on the part of the hog raiser to assure their plans of success. "Here is why," said one farmer. "Unless farmers work normally during the next few months they can offset that cut of 5,000,000 head from production by increasing the tonnage on a smaller number of hogs. Swine accumulate weight rapidly if crowded for weight. That, I believe, is why it is suggested that the tax be paid only on pork procured from hogs over a certain weight. A sort of penalty on those who refuse their coöperation in holding down tonnage to normal figures and permit the reduction of 5,000,000 head in the crop to actually reduce pork production."

NORTH WESTERN EXTENDS TIME FOR BOND PLAN

Announcement has been made by the Chicago and North Western Railway company that to date more than 75 per cent of the Fremont, Elkhorn and Missouri Valley Railroad company 6 per cent consolidated mortgage bonds, due Oct. 1, 1933, have assented to the refinancing plan offered June 15, 1933. The plan provides for payment of 50 per cent of the face amount of the bonds, with accrued interest, in cash, and delivery in respect to the remaining 50 per cent of a like amount of 5 per cent general mortgage bonds of 1987 of the company, due Nov. 1, 1987.

Because many holders who wish to assent may have been unable to present their bonds within the time first set, the railway company will continue, up to the close of business Sept. 15, 1933, to pay 10 per cent in cash upon presentation of bonds for stamping. No further extension of time within which bondholders may receive an advance cash payment will be made.

25 Per Cent of National Surety Bonds Deposited

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 10.—The nationwide committee for holders of real estate mortgage bonds guaranteed by the National Surety company announced today that more than $11,500,000 face value of these bonds had been deposited with it. This is about 25 per cent of the bonds outstanding. The committee is headed by C. Prevost Boyce of Baltimore.

Mr. Boyce announced that the committee had been formed to represent the bondholders of the National Union Mortgage company.

SEE NEW YORK'S HEAVY TAXES AS AIDING CHICAGO

Burdened Trade Can Find Relief Here.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

New York City's proposals to levy drastic new taxes on many business activities in a desperate effort to save its credit—threatened as a result of years of extravagance—should work to the benefit of Chicago.

This opinion was expressed last night by a number of Chicago leaders who see in the proposed "oppressive taxes" an instrument which may drive business out of the nation's metropolis. Chicago's many natural advantages plus the real progress being made in cutting local governmental expenditures should bring a large part of the business lost to Gotham here, these leaders feel.

Chicago's leaders pointed to the accomplishments of the Sargent committee on behalf of economy. They recalled the recent statement of Assessor J. L. Jacobs that the 1932 tax bill for real estate will be substantially lower than that for 1931, which is now in collection. They mentioned the opposition which Mayor Kelly so far has offered to proposals that might increase taxes.

Profit from Mistakes of Others.

Recalling the experience of Wisconsin which forced numerous business and industries out of the state by burdensome taxes and of New York state, which by high taxes impelled many enterprises to incorporate in Delaware, they called this a golden opportunity for Chicago and Illinois to build up industry and business by profiting from the mistakes of others.

Among the new taxes proposed for New York city are a 5 cent tax on all taxicab rides, a 50 per cent increase in water rates, a 5 per cent tax on the gross incomes of all persons engaged in buying and selling stock market securities, a stock transfer tax of 4 cents per share on each share transferred—limited to affect residents of the city—a tax of ¼ of 1 per cent on the value of investments of all saving banks and life insurance companies incorporated under the state of New York and having their principal offices in the city, and a tax of 1½ per cent on the gross income of public utilities from customers living in the city.

Ready for Any Contingency.

"The supposition is that if taxes become oppressive in New York city, business will be driven to take refuge elsewhere," remarked George W. Rossetter, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce. "Chicago is making a sincere effort to reduce its cost of government and to lower its taxes. As the metropolis of the middle west—the heart of the nation—Chicago stands ready with ample facilities to meet any contingency in taking care of any business or industry driven from New York by oppressive taxes."

D. F. Kelly, president of the Fair store and former head of the committee to reduce public expenditures, commented as follows:

"Chicago's financial position is improving. This city was fortunate in that its troubles started two years ago so that it is able to relieve them at a time when other cities are just really feeling the financial pinch.

"This city should benefit to a great extent if burdensome taxes are imposed on New York business. In the cases of companies which have offices both here and in New York other cities would likely do business with the Chicago office. I might cite the case of New York's corporation tax, which drove countless corporations to incorporate in Delaware. It is easy to see what will happen if crushing taxes are imposed in Gotham."

Facilities for Stock Exchange.

Peter B. Carey, president of the Chicago Board of Trade, said:

"Taxes can go so high and no higher. When they become oppressive in a community business will leave it. Should the New York Stock exchange be forced out of its present home, Chicago has adequate facilities to handle its business. In fact, we have here the facilities for taking care of any business or industry that feels it expedient to move. Chicago will be very glad to gain such business."

Chicago's geographical situation and its invigorating climate were cited among the reasons why business and industry could locate here to advantage.

"We have the best of railroad, waterway, and airway facilities here," one leader remarked. "When it comes to banking, Chicago's major institutions came through the depression with a magnificent record, with less than 1 per cent of its bank resources tied up as a result of the moratorium."

It was pointed out that New York proposes to increase its water rate 50 per cent. This city, with a huge lake filled with clear fresh water at its door, has a decided advantage over New York, which must pipe its water 150 miles.

Irritation in Taxi Tax.

It was stated that the 5 cent tax on taxicab fares would be a constant source of irritation to riders.

Should insurance companies and banks decide to quit New York because of a tax of ¼ of 1 per cent on their investments, Chicago has a number of modern buildings ready to receive them, including a two story palace on Lake Shore drive.

The 5 per cent tax on gross incomes of persons engage in the securities business should move this group to look at the recreational facilities offered at the end of the day's business. Lake Michigan is ready to receive the largest of their yachts and there are plenty of first class polo fields in the suburbs.

Chicago, the center of the nation's telegraph system, is ideally located for the stock exchange business. Telegraph tolls would be less if the exchange were located here.

U. S. TAXES YIELD ONE BILLION 620 MILLION IN YEAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Americans smoked 109,400,465,517 cigarets, bought 4,676,933 gallons of medicinal liquor, and drank 6,615,926 barrels of newly legalized beer during the 12 months period ended June 30, Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering announced today.

Computing national consumption on the basis of tax collections, Commissioner Helvering revealed also that 12,492,941,202 gallons of gasoline were used, 4,494,769,833 cigars smoked, and 35,583,332 pounds of snuff chewed or sniffed.

Citizens indulging themselves in these pleasures helped the government to roll up tax collections amounting to approximately one billion, 620 million dollars during the fiscal year which closed at the end of June, according to Commissioner Helvering's report.

More Cigarets Smoked.

Cigaret consumption showed the first pickup last year since the beginning of the depression, according to the figures. Smokers bought 3 billion 600 million more "fags" than in the 1932 fiscal year. Consumption of cigars and medicinal liquors fell off.

Consumption taxes, such as those on beer, cigarets, and gasoline brought the government a larger share of revenue last year than ever before in post-war history, according to the report. All miscellaneous internal revenue taxes yielded 873 million dollars, or considerably more than half of the 1 billion 620 millions collected from all sources.

The income tax, the other important source of internal revenue, failed to live up to its record, despite heavy rate increases. It brought in only 747 million dollars during the fiscal year, a decline of 310 millions under the previous year. An analysis presented by Commissioner Helvering showed that collections on each of the quarterly payment dates were lower than in the previous year, although higher rates went into effect on Jan. 1.

Miscellaneous Taxes Gain.

Miscellaneous taxes, on the other hand, showed a gain of 372 million dollars, which exceeded by 62 million dollars the decline in the income tax and thereby permitted the government to show its first increase in tax collections since the depression began. Gains in miscellaneous collections were due to the imposition of 25 new nuisance taxes last year.

Every $100 which he extracted from taxpayers during the fiscal year cost Uncle Sam $1.85 in collection charges, the commissioner's report showed. The task of getting taxes was 32 cents cheaper per $100 last year than the year before, when the average was $2.17. Cost of collecting last year's 1 billion 620 million dollars was slightly more than 30 millions.

AUTUMN, WORLD FAIR KEEP CHICAGO TRADE AT SUMMER'S LEVELS

Chicago department stores profited last week from the strong seasonal impetus. Active buying on the part of visitors to the World's Fair and the revival in the autumn are expected to raise sales to levels as high as those maintained during the summer months, according to trade observers of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Sales figures made public during the last week revealed that several lines of trade continue to improve. In comparison with business figures of a year ago, one of the larger local mail order houses showed an increase of over 20 per cent on sales. Increases in various of the chain stores ranged from 12 per cent to 32 per cent over a year ago. Drug sales have increased more than 12 per cent in several instances.

Automobile sales in the local area displayed a new gain. According to figures from one distributor, sales of cars and trucks to domestic users last month represented the best August since 1930 and came within 54 units of equaling August that year. Reports from other motor sales confirmed this same trend.

FREE GOLD MARKET BOOSTS WEST'S GOLD MINES INCOME 40 PCT.

In a weekly report on far western business, the Bank of America National Trust and Savings association has announced that an increase of 40 per cent in the income of gold producing companies of the west is indicated as a result of the recent presidential order liberalizing gold exports, providing that production, exchange quotations, etc., continue at about current levels. Under increased prices last year's gold, which ran about $51,675,000, would reach about $72,000,000 in value.

Higher prices, it is stated further, may be expected to revitalize the gold mining industry. Gold production runs around 2,500,000 fine ounces a year, 55 per cent of which comes from 10 far western states, California alone producing 20 per cent of the total. This gold has been selling at a statutory price of $20.67 an ounce, whereas the current world price approximates $30.

While the gold output comes largely from small producers, the major companies will benefit substantially. What the ruling may mean to some of the principal national producers is indicated as follows:

SEN. VANDENBERG WILL ADDRESS BANK GROUP HERE

The effect of the federal bank deposit guarantee act upon state banking systems will form a leading subject for discussion at the annual convention of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks, it was announced yesterday by State Auditor Barrett. Mr. Barrett is chairman of the committee on arrangements of the convention, which opens this morning at the Congress hotel.

Senator Arthur H. Vanderberg [Rep., Mich.] is to speak before the convention tomorrow on the general subject of federal bank legislation, and his speech will be followed by a general discussion of the matter on the convention floor. The convention will also discuss problems arising in connection with the liquidation of closed banks.

Mr. Barrett will deliver the address of welcome to the assembly of officials today, and will be followed by H. W. Koeneke, bank commissioner of Kansas, and Robert C. Clark, commissioner of banking and insurance of Vermont, who is president of the association.

SMALLEST OATS CROP IN FORTY YEARS EXPECTED

Feeding to Live Stock to Be Curtailed.

Feeding of oats to live stock will have to be materially curtailed this season owing to the smallest crop secured in 40 years, and the grain trade is anticipating government assistance may be necessary in parts of the northwest during the coming winter owing to the failure of feed grain crops in that area.

"The trade has always been mystified as to where all the oats went during the course of the season," said Nat C. Murray, the Clement, Curtis & Co. statistician.

"Use of oats varies widely in different parts of the United States. In the south the grain is fed almost entirely to work stock. In the dairy sections, such as Wisconsin, the bulk is fed to dairy cattle.

"In Iowa, which is the largest oats producing state and also the largest hog raising area, more oats are fed to pigs than to horses or dairy cattle. In the last 15 years the use of oats has been expanding as a feed for dairy cattle and for young stock, fully offsetting the effect of fewer horses.

"Yearly consumption of oats in recent years has been close to 1,200,000,000 bushels. Of this amount horses and mules account for 385,000,000 bushels, or 32 per cent of the total, dairy cows and calves, 320,000,000 bushels, or 26.7 per cent; pigs, 190,000,000 bushels, or 15.8 per cent, while 35,000,000 bushels, or 3 per cent, are used for human food. The balance of the crop is accounted for by feeding to pigs, poultry, seed, and other purposes."

ICKES APPROVES $224,000 LOANS TO SIX CITIES

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Secretary Ickes today approved loans and grants totaling $224,000 to six municipalities for public works projects. Thirty per cent of the total is granted outright and the balance is lent. Montgomery, Ala., received a total of $70,000, including a grant of not more than $21,000 for three deep wells and pumps.

A $60,000 allotment to New Brunswick, N. J., included a grant not exceeding $18,000 for extension of its water supply system. Petersburg, Ind., was given $50,000, including a sum of not over $15,000, for construction of a modern water filtration works.

Northport, Mich., received $32,000, including an amount not to exceed $9,600 for a deep well.

Credit Jewelers to Open Chicago Convention Today

Credit jewelers, who constitute 95 per cent of the retail jewelers of the country, will open a three day convention today at the Hotel Sherman. The main business of the convention will be to discuss the fair practice sections of a tentative code which has been submitted to Washington and on which a hearing will be held soon.

Timid Banks Warned by Roosevelt Aid

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—(AP)—Confidence was expresed in an authorized interview tonight by Louis M. Howe, secretary to President Roosevelt, that some means will be found to persuade timid bankers that extension of credit is vital to national recovery.

Discussing the efforts of the administration to bring about national industrial recovery, Howe said that news reaching Washington is encouraging and that "from every direction it looks as if we were rapidly emerging from the woods."

Rests on Confidence.

Expressing the belief that the whole thing hinges on confidence, he said there is actually more money in the country than before the depression, but that "the people lost faith in the banks, the banks lost faith in their credits, and everybody lost faith in everybody else," with the result that money was withdrawn from banks and hidden.

Confidence, he said, is returning, but added that:

"There are a good many bankers, I fear, who are still afraid to lend on anything less certain than gold dollars, for fear hard times will come back again."

Some Still Fearful.

"To be perfectly honest," said Howe, "there are far too many of them (bankers) still shivering in a dark corner of the cellar, but that is not being overlooked by the government, nor is the necessity for extending credit. It is well understood in one way or another means will be found to persuade the bankers, as well as everybody else, that a return of courage is a vital factor in bringing us finally and permanently out of our troubles."

REDUCE WEIGHT OF NEW STEEL FREIGHT CARS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 10.—The American Railway association has built five fifty-ton capacity steel box cars, each two tons lighter than cars of the same capacity previously built, without, it is said, a reduction in strength. By changing the trucks, the cars may be converted to forty ton capacity.

The reduction in weight was accomplished by rearranging the frame, and the association is studying means for lowering the weight further by the use of alloys "without unwarranted first cost for such materials." The cars, which are designed with the greatest width and height possible under free interchanging between railroads, will be subjected to testing by different lines.

LEE DISCLOSES ARMOUR FEES PAID BANKERS

Receive $1,300,000 in Ten Years.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Armour & Co., packers, paid approximately $1,300,000 in salaries from 1923 through last year to the three bankers serving as members of the finance committee, T. G. Lee, president, disclosed yesterday.

Mr. Lee revealed the salaries of the finance committee members to stockholders in a communication which takes individually each of the questions addressed to the management during the proxy contest over the proposed financial reorganization.

He further stated that the salaries of the finance committee members have been scaled down sharply since the new management took office early in 1931.

Pay of Bankers.

Samuel McRoberts, director of the Manufacturers Trust company, New York, is now receiving $18,000 a year as chairman of the committee, and A. H. Wiggin, director and former chairman of the Chase National bank of New York is receiving $12,000 a year as a member. The third member of the committee, James R. Leavell, president of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, is serving without compensation and has done so since he took office in October last year.

Arthur Reynolds, former chairman of the Continental, who gave up his position with the bank around the first of this year, received a salary of approximately $375,000 as a finance committee member from 1923 until his resignation last year.

McRoberts received an annual salary of $60,000 from 1923 through 1931, while Wiggin and Reynolds received $40,000 a year apiece. In August, 1931, their salaries were cut 10 per cent along with other officers and employés. At the annual meeting of directors in February last year the present scale of $18,000 a year for the chairman and $12,000 for the other members was fixed. Because Mr. Leavell did not take any compensation, however, the total salaries of the finance committee is now only $30,000 yearly.

Takes Office in 1931.

Mr. Lee did not take office until January, 1931, following the death of F. Edson White, who was killed in a fall from his apartment window. In BUSINESS GAINS REVIEWS FIND; RETAIL SALES UP

Attendance at Movies Is Reported Better.

New York, Sept. 10.—(AP)—Despite an occasional thoughtful hesitation, business confidently continues to take all difficulties in its stride as it approaches the fall season.

The first week following the Labor day holiday—mythical dividing line between the traditional quiescence of summer and the expected autumnal advance—found general trade moving forward satisfactorily.

One of the most significant developments last week, in the opinion of experienced business observers, was the slowing down in the recession of some of the leading industries which had characterized operations last month.

Retail Sales Gain.

In the meantime, with the Blue Eagle winging its way across the country, the trend of retail sales has proceeded upward obviously unmindful of the general lifting of price levels, which have now extended to all departments. The new army of wage earners is using its purchasing power to cover deferred necessities.

"While a concerted vigilance is being maintained for any curtailment of buying," says Dun & Bradstreet discussing this point, "because price rises are outdistancing consumer income too rapidly, no evidence of this condition is apparent as yet. The chief aim at present apparently is to expand purchases to the limit of budgetary possibilities before further increases will have been made in retail selling prices."

Consumer buying of low priced dry goods, reports reveal, is reaching large proportions; many of the large department stores that bought in substantial quantities last March and April have disposed of most of their stock and have been forced to reorder for fall requirements. Recent wholesale buying, however, has been light.

Rise in Movie Attendance.

One financial yardstick, frequently overlooked but considered a valuable index of the status of general incomes, is the volume of paid admissions to cinema theaters. Since the fore part of July there has been a steady increase in such expenditures, a development which is contrary to the usual trend during the summer months. The gains during this period are estimated at from 12 to 20 per cent over the comparative months of last year.

Several of the fundamental industries showed a further tapering off in activity last week. Steel production, as estimated by the Iron Age, fell to 45 per cent of capacity last week, as against 47 per cent the preceding week. New business in finished steel, it was explained, was being held back pending the final adjustment of market prices to the conditions imposed by the NRA code.

Power Output Figure.

Electric power output for the week of Sept. 2 was 11.8 per cent ahead of a year ago, compared with the 13.5 per cent advance scored by the previous week. Automobile production last week again showed a decline from the preceding period, reported Cram. Output was estimated at 40,367 units, a decrease of 3,446, but still more than double the amount of the corresponding week of 1932. Railroad traffic for the week ended Sept. 2 amounted to 662,652 cars, 5.4 per cent ahead of the preceding week and 18.7 per cent over the like 1932 period. The weekly gain was viewed as better than seasonal and due principally to the improvement in coal and miscellaneous traffic.

With the aid of public works, August construction spurted 28 per cent ahead of July. Stock market values as of Sept. 1 were 3.9 billion dollars above Aug. 1.

R. F. C. PLAN FOR RAIL TRUSTEES IS NOT OPPOSED

New York, Sept. 10.—Dow Jones & Co. said today that no opposition is expected to develop against the motion to be made by the Reconstruction Finance corporation for appointment of a trustee for the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad.

The committee representing the bondsholders, it was stated, will support the R. F. C. motion, chiefly on the ground that "a general foundation toward possible reorganization should presumably be laid by a trustee or trustees acting as officers of the court who would be beyond any question as to impartiality as between the four chief groups interested in the property." These groups are the prior lien bondholders, general mortgage bondholders, unsecured creditors, and the stockholders.

Phillips Petroleum Co. Fills Employment Quota

Bartlesville, Okla., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—Frank Phillips, president of the Phillips Petroleum company, announced today that the company's program to add 3,000 employés in accordance with NRA provisions has been completed. Mr. Phillips stated he was making the announcement to save hundreds of applicants from disappointment.

Canadian Wheat Exports Fall Below August, 1932

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 10. — Wheat exported in August amounted to 8,652,970 bushels, valued at $6,656,511, compared with 18,289,832 bushels, valued at $10,642,471 for the corresponding month last year, says a report issued today by the Dominion bureau of statistics. In 1931, 11,909,108 bushels were exported, valued at $6,620,677.

BRITAIN SHOWS BETTER OUTLOOK FOR INDUSTRIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 10.—The business outlook in many British industries is promising, the department of commerce said today in its weekly summary of world economic conditions. The survey, in part, follows:

UNITED KINGDOM — There are quite a number of indications that British business is on the upward climb; business curves point to this in graphic fashion, but more important evidence of it is found in the greater degree of business confidence. This feeling that the worst is over is not reflected in every industry, but there is enough of it to characterize the situation in general as distinctly hopeful.

Some Observers Skeptical.

On the other hand, there is a feeling in some quarters that the present spurt of business improvement may be only temporary, and that, at any rate, it is a far less dependable indicator of prospects than would have been the case in pre-depression years.

British unemployment returns as of the end of July maintained the levels of a month earlier. There were 9,800,000 insured workers in employment at the end of July, about 8,000 more than in June. The unemployment registers showed a total of 2,442,000 unemployed, of which number 1,855,000 were wholly without work. The ratio of insured workers to insured unemployed, now a little more than 4 to 1, is the highest that has been reached in a long time.

The heavy industries that have shown improvement in recent months are holding their position, but coal mining, shoes, and motor vehicle manufacturing continue to show poorer employment totals.

Czechoslovakia Improves.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA—Little change occurred during August. Seasonal influences, however, reduced unemployment, stimulated building activity, and encouraged a few industrial operations. At the end of July 636,005 unemployed were registered, against 675,933 at the end of June, a decrease of about 6 per cent. In July, 1932, unemployment dropped only 3 per cent. On last July 31 unemployment was 40 per cent higher than at the same time in 1932. The decrease at present is due mainly to the public works program made possible through the flotation of the public works loan and to increased field work during the harvest.

EGYPT — A slight but steady improvement occurred in Egypt during the second quarter of 1933. This improvement resulted chiefly from the upward trend in the price of cotton, which registered a substantial gain toward the close of the quarter and enabled the government to dispose of a large part of its cotton stocks without any perceptible effect on the market.

Prices Rise in Japan.

JAPAN—A slight recession in the upward trend in wholesale commodity prices occurred in the latter part of August, reflecting lower staple prices in America, but prices of domestic articles increased, owing to the advance in rice, barley, and coal prices. Tokio retail prices on Aug. 15 were 18 per cent higher than in the previous month. The stock market has been showing slight improvement, although it weakened somewhat the last week in August.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS — Except for continued activity in gold mine stocks, conditions are featureless. Export prices are holding generally to last week's levels, with the exception of copra prices. The copra market is weak.

RUMANIA—A slight improvement has occurred recently in the general situation.

South Africa More Active.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA—General trade and industry continue to be stimulated by exceptional activity in gold mining operations. Railway earnings have advanced and commodity prices have increased. Orders for imported lines are being placed freely. Prices of farm products, especially wool, have shown considerable improvement and have caused renewed purchasing in the country districts. Industries generally are much more active.

IOWA INVESTMENT HOUSE TARGET IN BANKRUPTCY SUIT

Davenport, Ia., Sept. 10.—[Special.]—A petition of involuntary bankruptcy has been filed in federal District court in Davenport against George M. Bechtel & Co., Davenport investment house, and George M. and Harold R. Bechtel as co-partners in the business.

They are charged with insolvency and with acts of bankruptcy in having made payments to some creditors in preference to others.

The action was taken by Louis Roddweig and Jack Vollertsen, Davenport, as attorneys for four creditors, F. H. Baker, Ida Grove, Ia., and Sarah Grady, Mrs. A. E. Kreiter, executrix of the Henry Kreiter estate, and Ethel Lowry Brown, all of Davenport.

On a petition for a receiver in bankruptcy which accompanied the other papers Referee Walter A. Newport named C. C. Minard of this city as receiver. Furnishing a temporary $20,000 bond, he is to take immediate charge of all assets.

The defendants have 15 days in which to file an answer to the bankruptcy charges. If they present opposition a hearing must be held before Federal Judge Charles A. Dewey of Des Moines. Should they agree to adjudication in bankruptcy, or if they are declared bankrupt by Judge Dewey, a meeting of creditors will be called by Referee Newport to select a trustee and draft plans for bankruptcy procedure.

It was emphasized today that the bankruptcy petition does not involve the Bechtel Trust company of Davenport.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Statement of Pennsylvania railroad filed with the New York state public service commission, as of June 30 shows total assets of $2,203,593,919, as against $2,167,301,720 a year earlier. Profit and loss surplus stood at $205,002,638, compared with $205,636,134.

SALESMEN.

Results—over 700% sales increase and a natural increase in sales force to where present quarters are inadequate. A South and North Side branch has just opened, making a place for several more salesmen of EXPERIENCE required as there is no time for special sales training.

You can learn this business quickly and make a permanent place for yourself as rapid growth necessitates advancement from the ranks. Protected territories. Leads. Apply 9-11, 6857 S. Halsted, 4703 N. Western.

MEN

WE HAVE GOOD IMMEDIATE POSITIONS FOR MEN WHO WISH TO LEARN HOW TO CONDUCT OUR BUSINESS SUCCESSFULLY. THESE POSITIONS ARE PERMANENT.

These positions are genuine opportunities at high earnings for those who can do this kind of work successfully. As you will note from the information given below, our successful men are paid $4,000.00 to $8,000.00 per year or more. These men make this money regularly. There are no off-seasons. These incomes in cash are just as certain and stable as any business or professional positions possibly can be. Many of our men are exceeding the earnings they formerly made in their previous trades or businesses.

L. A. H. made $160.00 in the past 6 days—H. Van M. over $100 last week—J. D. and V. J. C. over $40 each in 1 day—M. M. made $42 last week and in four days this past week went ahead of it. C. B., a mechanic out of work, made $21 his first day of earnings in this business. T. T. earned $24 in 1 day. Seven men—O. A., F. P., O. M., F. L., C. H. and G. W. D.—within 3½ days after completing training last week went out and earned money. C. G. made $60 in 1 day. E. N. $21—P. P. $25—A. R. $94—N. Y. N. $47—all in 1 day. Here are some other day earnings—all these figures being the latest—R. O.—E. h. E.—J. T. U.—from $21 to $23.75—O. H. $67.50—and among weekly earnings are E. G. with $92 and W. L. with $162

Such earnings, typical of what our men are making today, throughout the entire country, are made possible by the amazing salability of our product. This unique Electrolux mechanical specialty [not refrigeration] is backed up by experienced, able management and many millions of dollars in resources.

We are not looking for the "smart" fellow, the "clever" talker, or the so-called high-pressure artist. We are interested in the earnest, sincere man, no matter what his previous experience, or training, who is willing to follow instructions, has formed the habit of doing a real day's work as a matter of course and not as a matter of exception.

Those who are inexperienced in specialty sales work must take the necessary time to learn and acquire skill. During this time, they must be willing and satisfied to get along on nominal earnings, $125.00 to $200.00 per month, if necessary. We cannot tell you how long it will take you to do this—whether one month, three months, or 6 months, but we do know that if you have the qualifications to satisfy our requirements, you can, with reasonable study, practice, good character and diligence, be genuinely assured of making a success which will afford you the higher earnings.

We have several opportunities for trustworthy, ambitious men who can learn how to qualify for similar earnings in our Chicago territory. This company is now in its greatest success, 1933 will be our fourth consecutive record sales year.

If you live in Chicago or any of its suburbs, and feel you can qualify, and if you really would appreciate the opportunity this position offers, call for personal interview with a company executive Monday morning, Sept. 11, from 9 to 1, Room 910-205 W. Wacker Drive.

BANKING SERVICE

IF YOU'RE TIRED OF THE HAND TO MOUTH EXISTENCE of a fluctuating "up and down" income, investigate a sensational new BANKING SERVICE that can sweep you into a new mental attitude over night.

To qualify, you must have good character and be able to furnish good references.

Selling experience desirable but not vitally important because if you have ability to make money, we will thru our systematic training, show you how to apply that ability to the most phenomenally successful sales work possible in Chicago at the present time.

BUT—you must be willing and able to work.

For information, address A O 50, Tribune.

NOTICE.

To men between the ages of 21 and 50 this position offers:

1—Opportunity to make money.
3—Pleasant year round work.
5—Leads and sales furnished.
9—Quality merchandise, nationally advertised.
10—Your work and territory protected.
11—Must have car.

For appointment apply in person Monday morning, 9 to 10:30, Room 1424, 36 S. State-st.

4 MEN.

Selling experience necessary. Unusual opportunity for men anxious to engage in permanent accumulative work with selected, with best records will be placed in charge of districts with several men, which means additional revenue. This is not a campaign, but an established permanent job with the most saleable product this market offers. Working through the stores of the local gas company. Apply Monday, between 10 a. m. and 2 p. m.

MR. J. V. MONAGHAN,
Room 1213, Peoples Gas Building.

COMMONWEALTH EDISON COMPANY

has openings in several sales divisions. Neat appearing young men with satisfactory references will be trained according to previous experience or qualifications. See Mr. Schutze, Room 1035, 125 S. Clark-st., 9 to 11 a. m. only.

MAN—AT ONCE; 25-45; WITH TACT AND good appearance; old est. sales org., but no sales experience req. for this proposition; immediate earnings; good future; not an investment; reference; 75 E. Wacker-dr., Rm. 605. Interviews will be granted Monday, 9 to 12. NO OTHER TIME.

WANTED — 121 WIDE AWAKE, ACTIVE men for permanent position in south and west end of city. Good pay. Refs. req. Apply 3-6 p. m., Rm 602, 59 E. Van Buren-st.

Commonwealth Reduces Rate on Loans

YOU MAY OBTAIN UP TO $300. The rate on balance above $100 is nearly one-third lower than the usual charge. Repay in 2, 3 or 6 months or take as long as 20 months. You are charged only for the time you keep the money.
